ORGANIZATION IS PERFECTED FOR EAST SIDE IN BIG COUNTY CROW HUNT

Holt county's big crow shoot, which starts on March 15th, and continues for forty-five days, is attracting much attention throughout the county. Not only are sportsmen taking much interest in the campaign to rid the county of the pests, but those who never have shot a gun are also giving the drive their financial as well as moral support.

Owing to extensive crow hunts in neighboring counties, the birds have fled to Holt county by the hundreds of thousands.

Besides the $300 purse appropriated by the county supervisors, the merchants of the nine towns in the county will offer individual prizes to the hunters and other residents of the county are subscribing money for ammunition.

The county has been divided into two equal districts, the east and west. The dividing line is the range line between Ranges 12 and 13, which runs one and one-half miles east of Emmet. Two hundred dollars of the reward will go to the district killing the most crows during the period and one hundred dollars to the losing side.

James McPharlin of O'Neill in captain of the east district of the county and Mose Campbell of Atkinson of the western one. The executive committee for the eastern district is M. F. Kirwin, chairman; James Davis, J. M. Hunter, W. E. Conklin and L. C. Peters. All are of O'Neill. The western committee is yet to be selected. The several precinct captains will be announced in a few days.

Heretofore the county has been kept fairly free of crows through the efforts of the county game protective association, which stages spring and fall drives but they are unable to successfully cope with the influx of crows seeking refuge from the poorly aimed but loud talking scatter guns of Holt county's neighbors.
