'SMASH SYSTEM' HIRAM'S PLEA TO VOTERS OF U. S.

Senator Charges Ousting of Daugherty Based on "Political Expediency"

BY CHARLES N. WHEELER, Universal Service Correspondent.
 Chicago, March 30.—Charging that the ousting of Attorney General Daugherty was based on "political expediency" and that President Coolidge will drag the republican party down to defeat if he is nominated, Senator Hiram Johnson, in Chicago Sunday night, let go a double barreled blast at the national administration leaders.
 "Here breaking a single individual, sending a few men to jail where they belong, will not do what is requisite," he said. "Behind the individuals and the whole sordid mess is the 'system,' the old unholy alliance of crooked big business and crooked politics."
 "It is this system, this alliance, we must smash. None can doubt what candidacy the system and alliance espouse. I am endeavoring, in the republican primary, to smash the one and defeat the other."
 Just Begun to Fight
 Fresh from his last tour through central Illinois, with all his fighting clothes on and his fists doubled up, Senator Johnson told his Illinois chiefs that he had just begun to fight, that his trip through the Dakotas and Nebraska had convinced him beyond the per adventure of a doubt that the republican party will be sunk beneath an avalanche of votes if the president is nominated and that in his judgment the political tide is now flowing rapidly away from the White House.
 The senator predicted he would sweep Illinois in the preferential primaries one week from Tuesday. But, he added, regardless of what the primary states may do in the next few days, he is more firmly set than ever for a finish fight against the "unholy alliance" at Washington.
 Elated by Dakota Victory
 He left Sunday night for a four-day whirlwind swing across Michigan where the primaries will be held one week from Monday.
 The senator was highly elated over the South Dakota result, although the margin was not very great. He told the newspaper men that in all his political campaigning he never encountered such an avalanche of money and pressure from job holders as in South Dakota. Even to the most insignificant cross roads postmaster, he said, the screws were applied. Civil service was a by-word, he alleged.
 "I have no illusions," the senator added, after recounting his experiences with the "steam roller" and the gumbo roads. "I know what a terrific giant I am attacking. But so long as I have the strength I shall not desist in my fight on this unholy invisible government and to the end that both country and party may be saved."

Text of Statement
 The senator's formal statement follows:
 "The manner of the dismissal of Daugherty demonstrates that the administration is actuated in the present crisis, not by a desire to clean up the nasty mess at Washington, but wholly by political expediency.
 "Daugherty is declared, in effect, by the president to be free from taint, and obviously his dismissal was a yielding to pressure dictated by politics. Denby's resignation was of like character.
 "If these men had done no wrong, if the president did not believe in 'lynching,' if, as he once asserted, they were entitled to trial and defense, then their dismissal, under the circumstances, was unjust and unfair.
 "Many of us believed the situation otherwise, but the president's position was at variance with ours, and now political expediency rules.
 "There can be no honest clean up, no triumph of right or justification of principles upon the sole theory of the senatorial advisers of the president, now accepted by him, of political expediency.
 Voters Reverse Politicians
 "Contributing to the result was the South Dakota primary. Here in the proposal convention, ruled by politicians, Mr. Coolidge was overwhelmingly successful. For three months the interest press had boasted of Mr. Coolidge's strength and how he would easily win.
 "The contest was the first clean cut fight. Hired orators, national figures, a cabinet officer, postoffice inspectors, Indian agents, were imported into the state; full page advertisements, all the machinery of the government, was utilized with unlimited sums of money.
 "But while politicians controlled a convention by two to one for Mr. Coolidge, people decisively defeated him.
 "Immediately thereafter Mr. Coolidge's mind changed in regard to Mr. Daugherty.
 "Here breaking a single indi-

League of Nations Proposal Will Be Presented to U. S. Soon
Universal Service.
 Washington, March 30.—The plan of the League of Nations to perfect a convention restricting international traffic in arms which would meet the approval of the United States, will be considered here soon.
 Joseph C. Grew, formerly United States minister of Switzerland, will outline the plan to Secretary of State Hughes when he arrives here next month to assume his new duties as under secretary of state.
 Grew, acting as unofficial observer for this government, attended the conference of the league's subcommittee on arms which drew up the plan. Whether the United States will subscribe to the proposal will depend largely on his recommendation. It was learned.
 The new plan is understood to contain provisions designed to meet the objections of this government to the treaty of St. Germain in which this government refused to participate.
 Secretary Hughes' principal objection to the convention of St. Germain was that it prohibited signatory powers from selling arms or ammunition to states not party to the convention. On the other hand, traffic in arms between signatory powers was practically unrestricted.

THOUSANDS WATCH FLOOD
 Washington, March 30.—Thousands of automobilists and hikers went out for a sight of the turbulent, murky Potomac which has risen seven feet since Saturday, due to heavy rains above and the collapse of the dam at Stony River, Md. The warm weather brought out the biggest crowd of sightseers of the year.
 Gangs of men and boys worked all day to save boats, boat houses, floats and barges. Above Washington, mostly at Georgetown, are located numerous boat houses. Included are the establishments which serve Georgetown university canoeists, the Corinthian Yacht club and others. Many boats have been sunk or swept away.
 The current at Georgetown was about 10 miles an hour. At noon the water was rising at the rate of five inches an hour, and this rise continued until 4 o'clock, when the rise diminished, and by 6 o'clock was at the rate of two inches an hour.
 Several members of congress went to the lower docks to see the flood. If the water continues to rise through midnight, parts of Potomac park, near the Lincoln memorial will be flooded.
 Joseph E. Duryee, 33 year old, treasury department law clerk, was drowned in the Potomac flood. He was trying to push driftwood away from a wharf when he lost his balance. In the swift current he was swept away before any effort could be made to rescue him.

THIRTY KILLED AND 250 HURT; TRAINS STALLED

Pittsburgh District Hardest Hit—Railroad Bridges Washed Away

BY WILEY S. SCRIBNER, Universal Service Correspondent.
 Chicago, March 30.—Floods menaced the eastern part of the country Sunday night while the west shivered. The flood and cold, followed in the wake of the storm that swept from west to east across the country from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic seaboard during the last three days.
 Reports from throughout the country show approximately 30 lives were lost, 250 injured and millions of dollars damage suffered.
 The Pittsburgh district of Pennsylvania was hard hit, according to Sunday night's dispatches.
 In the city of Pittsburgh streets were converted into canals, and train service was crippled. The steel mills were compelled to close. All streams in the Appalachian mountains are out of their banks. In some districts the flood carried away buildings. It was feared loss of life would be increased.
 Trains Marooned
 In the mountain districts of Maryland and West Virginia, according to dispatches from Cumberland, Md., conditions were particularly bad. A passenger train bound for Chicago was marooned by washed out bridges. It carried more than 100 passengers.
 The Capitol Limited, crack train of the Baltimore and Ohio, which left Chicago for Washington at one o'clock Saturday afternoon, was caught by the flood and stalled for many hours.
 In Chicago snow fell for 24 hours but only an inch or two lay on the ground. Sunday night the temperature was below freezing.
 Further to the northwest great damage had resulted from the blizzard. Telegraph and telephone communication was crippled over Wisconsin, Minnesota, and parts of Nebraska and Dakota.
 Deaths Increased
 Snow drifts 10 feet deep tied up railroad traffic in South Dakota and Nebraska.
 In the southwest where hurricanes swept over the country, conditions were improved. Clearing weather had set in.
 Ice in the Mississippi river was breaking up. The water was rising rapidly but reports indicated ice bergs would not be serious.
 The 23 deaths growing out of the storm, reported Saturday night increased by four drownings in the east and three additional deaths by drowning as yet unconfirmed.
