Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Radaker, of Newport, were in O'Neill a short time Tuesday looking after business matters. They are on their way to Pennsylvania where they will visit relatives and friends at New Bethlehem, Seminole, and other points in the state, for the next three weeks.

Jerome Long and R. M. Melton, of Norfolk, were in O'Neill Wednesday visiting with the business men and arranging for a meeting with the commercial club in regard to the feasibility of starting a bus line between O'Neill and Spencer. These gentlemen were not asking for money in any way but were desirous of getting the opinions of the different ones in regard to the probable amount of travel over the route. They propose to make two round trips each day starting from O'Neill in time to connect with morning and evening trains from Spencer. The route will be begun some time during the next ten days if they decide to start the bus. Mr. Long will be remembered by many in O'Neill as he was one of the steel workers on the Golden hotel when it was built in 1910.

GANNON BRIDGE BREAKS DOWN WHILE FARMER IS CROSSING WITH A LOAD

Frank Baldwin, and two boys, aged ten and twelve years, living about eighteen miles northeast of O'Neill, came near losing their lives, as well as their four-horse team, last Thursday, when the Gannon bridge, two miles north of Inman, broke down in the center while they were crossing with a flat rack upon which they were moving an 8x12 chicken house. As the load reached the center of the bridge the bridge buckled, letting the occupants of the wagon and the horses into the water. Mr. Baldwin says that some of the horses were thrown from the bridge and that he really does not know how he managed to get his children and the horses to safety. Some of the horses were badly scratched and bruised by the accident. The county board of supervisors settled with Mr. Baldwin for a nominal sum for the damages to himself and his property. The Elkhorn river has been very high during the past week and we understand that the bridge was entirely washed away last Tuesday. A new 100-foot bridge has already been ordered to take the place of the one which has just gone out.

LEO H. ZIMMERMAN WRITES FROM KANSAS

Leo H. Zimmerman, formerly of this city, who is now manager of the Independent Cream Corporation, at Hutchinson, Kansas, writes The Frontier in regard to the removal of the remains and monument of the famous General O'Neill to this city:

Following is the letter: "I see by the issue of The Frontier dated June 12th, an item in regard to the moving of the remains and monument of the late General O'Neill to your city which I think is a grand move.

"The school children of Hutchinson, Kansas, all donated to the Harding memorial fund and have erected a monument here in the city park and also in the wheat field west of town where the late President Harding cut some wheat last year, while on his tour.

"I think that you people will have very little difficulty in raising a nice sum for the purpose of moving the remains and monument of the late General O'Neill to your city.

"With the kindest regards to you and all the old friends there,

I remain,
LEO H. ZIMMERMAN,
900-South Main St

"AIN'T NATURE WONDERFUL"

(By Uncle Pete in Omaha Bee.)

O'Neill, Neb., June 15.—After several seasons of secret experimentation Doc Wilkinson announces that he at last has succeeded in perfecting a hen which he will soon place upon the market. The new hen, the doctor believes, will place thousands of dollars into the pockets of the farmers and small country produce dealers annually during the summer months, dollars of which they are now deprived because of either the natural depravity of the common hen or her lack of knowledge of the state and federal pure food laws. The new fowl, he says, is not a freak-bred bird, but is the offspring of several generations of highly educated barn-yard chickens. The doctor first was attracted to the necessity for improvement of the common hen by the perversity of the large flocks which he maintained on his ranch just outside the city limits of Beaver Flats. The flock was one of noted layers and as a result each time the doctor came to town he was enabled to bring at least a case of eggs.

These eggs the local merchants were eager and glad to accept and later to ship as number 1s to the larger marts, where they were accepted without question until the first of June rolled around each year. The first of June is the date after which for several months both state and federal food laws require eggs to be candled, and after which all eggs must be shipped subject to candleation.

Just as soon as June 1 arrived the doctor noticed that the hens began to lay large numbers of bad eggs. No matter how carefully they were candled at home and by the local dealer bad ones continued to show up every time they changed hands and were re-candled.

Close observation of the flock convinced him that the blame lay with the birds and that many of them, either through natural meanness or a careless spirit brought on by warm weather, were laying bad eggs. Continued observation enabled him to spot the guilty fowls and then a course of discipline began.

Whenever a hen, caught in the trap nests, was discovered to have produced a bad egg she was sent to bed without her supper and her pleasures and recreations were restricted until she had produced a good one.

It didn't take long for the hens to figure out the relation between cause and effect and bad eggs ceased to be produced on the Wilkinson ranch. The old birds also taught their young the ways of rectitude until at last a strain of upright and conscientious chickens was perfected which is in great demand among the poultry fanciers of Beaver Flats.
