The Self-Possessed Prince

Bernard Shaw, as everyone knows, is self-possessed to the verge of being inhuman. In a letter to a friend he once illustrated the fact that he never cried over spilled milk by likening himself to an Indian prince whose favorite wife, when banqueting with him, caught fire and was burnt to ashes before she could be extinguished. The Indian prince took in the situation at once and faced it in a thoroughly Shavian manner. "Sweep up your missus," he said to his weeping staff, "and bring in the roast pheasant!"—Passing Show (London).

When firmness is sufficient, rashness is unnecessary.

Why America Must Have More Paved Highways

Almost every section of the United States is confronted by a traffic problem.

Month by month this problem is becoming more and more serious.

Hundreds of cars pass a given point every hour on many of our state and county roads. Downtown city streets are jammed with traffic.

Think, too, how narrow many of our roads are, and how comparatively few paved highways there are in proportion to the steadily increasing number of cars.

If the motor vehicle is to continue giving the economic service of which it is capable, we must have more concrete highways and widen those near large centers of population.

Every citizen should discuss highway needs of his community with his local authorities.

Your highway officials will do their part if given your support.

Why postpone meeting this pressing need?

An early start means early relief.

MANENCE OF CONSERVATISM

John W. Davis.
The irreconcilable conservative is as much the enemy of the constitution as any man in all this broad land. For governments are living things. They are, as somebody has said, merely the skin of a living organism—the nation itself. They must change and alter and progress with the changing needs of men; and no nation has ever been so wise, so profound, so foresighted, that it could anticipate the needs of the generations that were to follow and bind them in a strait-jacket of unchangeable law.
And if the constitution of this country, my friends, ever fails, it will be because of these insidious foes that attack it from within and not those who oppose it in the open where they can be met.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

In Indiana, according to Louis Seibold, old parties are forgotten; the Ku Klux Klan is the issue. One story, guaranteed by its narrator, but not by this writer, describes the scheme of an Indiana democrat. Working for the democratic state ticket, this statesman secured the services of a colored man whose two ears were cut off with razors in a "crap" game.

The task assigned to this earless colored worker for democracy is as follows:

He walks about the streets of Indianapolis, and to sympathizing colored brethren, asking how he lost his ears, he replies as mysteriously as possible, "sh-hh, I come from Alabama. The Ku Klux did that to me. And they will do it to you up here if they get control. Better vote for the democratic party. They are against the Klan."

War hatreds die rapidly. The other day American patriots wanted to lynch musicians for playing Wagner's music—not knowing, presumably, that Wagner had to leave Germany because of his opposition to the German Kaiser.

Last Monday night in the biggest theater in New York, a crowd of 6,000 gathered to honor Captain Eekener, of the ZR-3, rose to applaud "Deutschland Uber Alles."

Some of La Follette's admirers not only deny that Germany caused the war, but insist that the war was made by J. Pierpont Morgan and company. That's going too far. J. Pierpont Morgan did not make the war, but the war certainly did make J. Pierpont Morgan.

We have a little war in America, boot of prohibition. In that war 40 bootleggers have been killed by United States government agents, and 18 more by coast guards. In addition, hundreds have been killed in bootleggers' quarrels, and in fights between bootleggers and hijackers that prey on bootleggers.
It costs the government more than $10,000,000 a year to carry on the, thus far, unsuccessful fight against whisky. Possibly light beer, which might provide successful competition with bootleg whisky, and would certainly yield the government a revenue of $500,000,000 a year, may eventually be tried.

Definite hope of a passenger flying service across the ocean comes from Akron.

The American Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation, now owning the Zeppelin patents, will build in Ohio, especially for trans-Atlantic passenger service, an airship of 5,000,000 cubic feet, twice the size of the ZR-3.

Before many years you will go to Europe, swiftly, comfortably, through the air, without seasickness. Business men in a hurry will leave for London or Paris on Monday, transact business in both cities, and be back in America for the following week end. And that is no dream. You will live to see it as a matter of course, and will answer the question "Papa, when are you going to fly to Europe again?"

The Russian government announces a budget, balanced without issuing any paper money, for the first time since the revolution. The total budget is only one billion gold dollars, pitifully small, compared with ours.

Whoever questions the ability of Russians to perform miracles knows little about Russia's history.
The country that Peter the Great could change from a stagnant, Oriental despotism to a great western power in one lifetime, can adapt itself to difficult conditions.

Jacob Franks, father of the boy murdered by Loeb and Leopold, establishes a fund to be used, after his death, to prevent release by pardon, parole or otherwise of the two young murderers condemned to life imprisonment.

Franks' money may balk some good natured or corrupt official, willing to release the young murderers hereafter. It is likely, however, that the parents of those two boys will do more than any fund to keep their sons in prison. There they are safe against themselves.

Conservative Democrats Not Likely To Heed Butler's Tardy Call

From the Wichita Eagle

By some twist of the mind Butler, national republican campaign manager, has succeeded in getting the present national canvass into a curious condition. Butler, either with or without instructions, started out with one idea and that idea was to compel the voter to support Coolidge. The foundation of his campaign was to saturate the nation with the calm assumption that Coolidge was unbeatable. He counted on the help of most of the newspapers in this and obtained it. But newspapers do not make men unbeatable. They can merely help in such an assumption. Butler, having got the assumption to working, followed it with an attitude of indifference to groups.

The progressive democrats, who were left in a strange mood after John Davis' nomination, were not appealed to by Butler in Coolidge's behalf. Seemingly he didn't care for them. The progressive republicans, who earlier in the campaign were a good deal at sea, were specifically barred out of the republican plan.

Within the last three weeks the republican managers have for the first time made a distinct appeal for other than republican votes. They are now driving for the conservative democrats of the East. This makes their present plan one in which they expect victory through a coalition of conservatives regardless of party. It was not the plan at first. That plan was to put Coolidge and Dawes before the country and assume their victory. Those who preferred not to vote for Coolidge and Dawes simply chose to be in the minority. It was an attitude of "take it or let it alone." The position was: if the citizen cares to help in the election of a president, he can vote for Coolidge; he has no choice as to the winner himself; that has been pre-determined. Now the curious development in this is that while those who chronically hunt the bandwagon may be more or less impressed with the Coolidge cinch, everybody else has been alienated, and when Butler now turns to the conservative democrats for help he finds them singularly cold. In 1896 Mark Hanna was out for the conservative democrats early in September. Butler in 1924 didn't let them know he cared for their votes until late in October.

BORES

Irving Cobb.

Once a bore always a bore. When a man speaks of himself invariably he is interested, for he has what to him is the most fascinating tonic on earth; but how rarely does he succeed in being interesting to the audience. Take the average confident egotist, whether he be an after-dinner speaker, a chronic candidate for office or a mere lay worker, and harken to him as he studies his conversation with capital I's, planting them in thicker and ever thicker as he goes along, and what do we get? A mental picture of a picket fence extending all the way around a vacant lot—that's what we get.

TODAY

Ford gets things done. He loads tractors, cars and trucks on his own ships, at River Rouge, in the heart of this country, 1,000 miles from the ocean. The first boat, "the Onondaga" will sail in a few days from the Ford plant to Buenos Aires, South America.

Another Ford ship, "Onelda" will carry cargoes from Ford plants in Detroit to Jacksonville, Florida, New Orleans, and Houston, Texas. Ford is to be thanked for showing the people of this country what ought to be done and can be done.

The government, which found so many billions for the wars of other people in Europe, ought to find a few dollars for building the canals that this country needs. One canal would unite the lakes and the Mississippi valley with the gulf and the Pacific via Panama. Another canal for ships unites the lake country with the Atlantic. "Every big American city a seaport" should be our motto.

The Rev. Dr. Stratton, a firm believer, suggests that a shark, not a whale, may have swallowed Jonah. The Bible doesn't say "a whale," it only says "a great fish." A shark has been known to swallow a deer whole, the deer subsequently being found in the shark's stomach. If a deer, why not Jonah, asks the Rev. Dr. Stratton.

But what about the shark's gastric juice and its effect on Jonah's skin? In Jonah, chapter 1, 17th verse, it says, "And Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights." There is one real miracle. Why was he not digested, or smothered?

There is an answer. It says "now, the Lord had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah." It was evidently a fish "especially prepared." It might have had a stomach as big as a dining room, with special ventilation arranged through the fish's gills. Dr. Stratton is right in his statement that everything is possible.

The "National Security League," apparently a rather timid, shaky, shivery organization, wanted Uncle Sam to refuse admittance to Countess Karolyi, wife of the former president of Hungary. A little common sense leaked in somewhere. The countess was allowed to land here.

The "security" of this country of 112,000,000 must be dubious and uncertain if it can't stand the arrival of a well educated, intelligent woman whose husband sought to establish in Hungary the kind of a government that we have here.

A man 86 years old, runs away with a girl of 14, his own step-grandchild. That's in Kentucky. In Chicago, a girl of 16 is accused of leading a band of robbers. In modern foolishness and crime the cradle and the grave seem mixed up.

The Chicago girl is a sordid, imitation young Circe, luring men to places where they might be conveniently robbed by her band.

A certain canny Scotsman had carried on a courtship of long duration without definitely committing himself. The girl, if she worried herself at the long probation, gave no sign until one morning her tardy lover, thumbing a small notebook, said:

"Maggie, I have been weighing up your good points, and I have already gotten ten. When I get a dozen I'm goin' to ask ye the fatal question."
"Well, I wish ye luck, Jack," answered the maiden. "I have also gotten a wee book, and I have been puttin' doon your bad points. There are 19 in it already, and there it reaches a score I'm gaug accept the blacksmith."

Revising Legends.

From the Boston Transcript.
Listen, my children, and you shall hear
The amended story of Paul Revere.

So might it read in revised version were certain remarks made this week by Louis P. Benezet, superintendent of schools of Manchester, N. H., to be accepted as correcting history. Before Molly Stark Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, Mr. Benezet, according to the Manchester Union, said that it was Dr. Samuel Prescott, instead of Revere, who carried the news to Lexington that the British were on the way. Among the members of Molly Stark Chapter is Mrs. Louise W. Woodman, a daughter of the late Samuel Adams Drake, the historian. Mrs. Woodman promptly comes forward with defense of the accepted story of the ride of Paul Revere, pointing out that it was after he reached Lexington and had started for Concord that Revere was held up by a British patrol, and that it was to Concord that Prescott rode after he had escaped when Revere was captured. Mr. Benezet appears to have fallen into the error that this occurrence was before Lexington was reached.

The controversy in Manchester while it fails to diminish the glory of Paul Revere, serves to call attention to the fact that much that appears in published history is essentially traditional in its character, its acceptance being based upon probability rather than because it is susceptible of proof in accordance with the rules of evidence. There, for example, is the famous remark attributed to that doughy warrior of revolutionary fame for whose wife the Molly Stark Chapter of the Daughters of the Revolution is named. Did Gen. John Stark on the eve of the battle exclaim: "We beat them today or Molly Stark's a widow?" The tale has been generally accepted. It is not improbable that a brave man might have made such remark. But in later days it has been asserted that Mrs. Stark's first name was Elizabeth. Is Molly Stark Chapter, through its name, perpetuating history, or tradition? Perhaps the members are able to answer the question.

Shocked By Young Generation.
Dhan Gopal Mukerji in the Atlantic Monthly.

I must say that besides unlearning many things (upon my return to Calcutta) I was forced to learn a great deal, mostly my nephew's and niece's, were very forward and assertive.
I said to myself, "They have no manners at all. Why, when we were their age—18 or 20—we were seen, never heard. The young are a terrible spectacle now days, the world over. No doubt they have their excellence, but that does not excuse their demerits. Imagine young people thirty years ago arguing to prove one of their seniors wrong. We never did such rude things."
My nephews and nieces not only contracted me, but told me to my face that I was not good—but—good—good. I was so enraged that I could have murdered the lot of them, and felt no regret.

Every dog must have his day, however, even those modern youngsters. My niece told me that she thought men ought to attempt to "live up" to the women. (Yes, she spoke English.) As if they had done anything else these centuries. She added insult to injury by saying that a man like me, who relaxes too much at home, will not be tolerated within another twenty years. I was advised to keep up the mark at home as I did abroad.

Then another niece, an orthodox soul, enjoined upon me two baths and three meditation hour a day. She also thought my relations with God were too loose.

Now I ask the traveled reader if this does not sound like his own home-coming. I have since then decided to live on steamships and Pullman trains. Never shall I willingly go where the young are changing the future nearer to their heart's desire.

Silage Gases Dangerous

According to the United States Department of Agriculture the poisonous gases formed in a silo overnight while the silo is in process of being filled are deadly to persons. Freshly cut silage in the partially filled silo is the cause. When there is no air circulation the gases remain in considerable volume; immediate death may result from entering such a silo. To avert this danger, says the department, run the ensilage cutter for a few minutes before anyone enters the silo. Air currents stirred up by the blower will either dilute the gases or drive them from the silo.—Exchange.
