Lead, S. D., Nov. -After drilling for a period of two months, workmen in the employ of the Homestake Mining company have succeeded in reaching the stope beneath Gold street, in this city, which is to be filled with sand to prevent the street caving in. The stope is that of old mine workings which extended under the street and which had long since been "worked out."

The great cavity under the street was regarded as a menace, so it was decided to fill it. In order to fill the cavity a pipe line has been laid from the cyanide plant of the Homestake company to the cavity, entering it through the hole which has just been drilled by the workmen. Waste sands from cyanide plant will be pumped through the pipe line into the cavity.

IN VAGUE WAY

Nebraska Rail Commission Finds Hard Work Determining Intent

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 4. (Special)-The state railway commission is fearful that it may have to add a grammarian to its staff of experts. The last legislature passed a law intended to compel physical connection with existing transmission lines whenever any person, firm, association, corporation or municipality constructed a line to tap the main leads. This is how the law reads in one paragraph:

"Any municipal corporation which may construct or acquire its own lines which may apply for such physical connection and service from such electric transmission line, which may be constructed to or pass by or through said city or village."

The question the commission must decide is whether the relative pronoun "which" following the words "transmission line," refers directly and solely to that line or dies it refer back to municipal corporation. In other words, must the municipality, if it wants to connect up with a power company lead, build its own line miles across country and then force a physical connection or is its power to force the supplying of current limited to where the transmission lines pass by or through the municipality.

The case is before the commission on the request of the village of Cotesfield to arbitrate the fee that ought to be paid the village of Elba, which paid $9,300 to build a line to tap the Central Power company leads. Elba wants $2,000 and Cotesfield says it is too much.

SHERIFF BADLY WOUNDED IN GUN BATTLE

North Platte, Neb., Nov. 4.-Miles Keller, sheriff of Perkins county, lies at death's door and Alfred Motsinger, alleged bootlegger, is badly wounded as the result of a shooting affray at Elsie, Neb., where the sheriff attempted to arrest Motsinger, who was said to be intoxicated. The two are now in North Platte hospitals, with little hopes for their recovery.

The sheriff of Perkins county, had been called to Eisie by the city marshal, Ray Witt, who said he heard rumors that Motsinger and a gang were going to "get" him at a dance. Just as the sheriff entered Elsie from Grant, he heard four shots, but paid little attention to the shooting. Arriving at the dance hall, he found Motsinger, and started to arrest him, ordering him to put up his hands, Motsinger replied by shooting with a 25-30 automatic, using a soft nosed bullet, the bullet striking the officer in the pit of the stomach, piercing the stomach in two places and the intestines in six places.

Motsinger was shot in the shoulder in the exchange of shots, the bullet from the officer's gun taking a downward course, and his lung was pierced. Mostinger, who is classed a transient by the police, arrived in Madrid, this summer. He is under guard at the hospital.

AGAIN APPEALS TO HIGH COURT

Omaha Street Car Company Rests Payment of $7,500 Damage Verdict

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 4. (Special.)-The Omaha & Council Bluffs street railway company is a $2,500 loser because it won an appeal case in the supreme court. J. P. Mercer, suing for personal injury damages, secured a judgment for $5,000 at the hands of the jury that first tried it. The company appealed to the supreme court and secured a reversal on the ground that the district judge gave erroneous instructions. On the second trial a jury gave Mercer $7,500. The company is again in supreme court with an appeal.

The case is a peculiar one. Mercer passed one of the company's barns on his way to and from work. On the day of the accident he sat down on a retaining wall outside the barn to wait for a friend working inside to come out. He sat with his back to the street. Along came a car that swung in towards the barn. It struck a split switch and the rear trucks landed on Mercer, breaking his hip. The company says he had no business where he was, and that it owed him no duty other than not to wantonly injure him.

SPECULATE AS TO GOVERNOR BRYAN'S COURSE Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 7. (Special)-A wary eye is cast by most politicians just now in the general direction where Governor Bryan is resting from his campaign labors. There is a strong suspicion that two years from now will find the governor right after the democratic nomination for the job he now holds.

Meanwhile he is generally expected to take the chautauqua platform, where he can earn as much in three months as he can as governor. The fame of his brother and the fact that the governor was a vice presidential candidate are sufficient to make him a good box office attraction, it is pointed out. The governor has none of the ready command of language or the golden voice of his brother, but starting out as an indifferent speaker he has developed into a good platform orator.

Another group of guessers say that he will start right after the next nomination for president, and that he will revive the Commoner for purposes of publicity of his program. The governor went to New York a candidate for president, convinced that he could carry the west and south, and politicians see in the program of the La Follette crowd to capture control of the democratic party a situation to his liking, as he believed La Follette never would have run had be been named.

UNUSUAL ONE

Nebraska Judge Re-Elected Though He Boosted Opponent

Scottsbluff, Neb., Nov. -P. J. Barron of Scottsbluff has been reelected judge of the Seventeenth judicial district of Nebraska at the end of a campaign which has no parallel in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. His sole public utterance during the entire campaign was a notice which he published at his own expense in each newspaper in his district before the primary election in which he referred in terms of glowing compliment to his opponent in the campaign, and compared his own qualification for the office with those of his opponent in a manner plain y disparaging to himself, closing with these words:

"It is one of the misfortunes of our state to have an elective judiciary, and, as is the way in democracies, candidates for office are sometimes over-persuaded of their own fitness. No doubt it would make for better government if aspirants for all public offices were less assertive in their own behalf, and, if this is true, it ought to be especially true of judicial candidates. I hope that no one will vote for me unless he or she believes, and has some ground for believing, that such a vote would be for the public good. To that end I am publishing this note in each newspaper in this juricial district."

Judge Barron's opponent made a very active campaign over the entire district during several months, by personal visit, mail, poster and extensive newspaper advertising. The judge stood pat and said no more. The voters on Tuesday re-elected Judge Barron by 1,500 majority.

CITY OF LINCOLN VOTES

TO SELL GASOLINE Lincoln, Neb., Nov. BOYS SOUGHT IN RELATION TO MURDER Hastings, Neb., Nov. -Donald Ringer and George Bender, two Hastings young men who disappeared from the city on the same day of the disappearance of Carl W. Moore, auto salesman, whose body was found near Roseland Saturday night, are being sought by the authorities for questioning.

Sheriff Harm and Chief Branagan say that Harvey Brecher, stepfather of Ringer, who is a Hastings painter, has discovered that one of his collection of hammers is missing, a machinist's hammer.

Ringer and Bender have been pals for four years. Bender's home is in Bellevue, Ill., officials say, and he came in contact with Ringer after the latter was paroled from the reformatory school at Kearney where he was sent from Clay county.

The officers find that Ringer and Bender did not leave Hastings together when they disappeared, and it has been found that at 10 o'clock Ben_ der was at a farm miles away from where the body of Moore was killed by a blow on the head.

But we do not know but that they did plan to meet somewhere," said Sheriff Harm. The county board is offering a reward of $1,000 for information that

FIND CLUE OF MISSING YAWL

Derelict May Prove to Be Craft Lost in North Atlantic

> BY MAX ENOS. Wireless to Universal Service. (Copyright, 1924.)

Aboard U. S. S. Trenton, North Atlantic, Nov. 9. (via Cape Race, N. F.)-An almost submerged derelict, answering the description of the 40 foot yawl, Lief Ericson, two months overdue from Norway, was reported Sunday by wireless by the passing steamer Arola Mendi in latitude 40:36 north, longitude 57:29 west, or about 800 miles astern of the Trenton.

This is the first clue received by the Trenton, newest United States light cruiser, which was sent into the north Atlantic to search for the Lief Ericson and its crew of fivs, headed by William Washburn Nutting, amateur yachtsman and writer. The Ericson left Norway to follow the course taken by "Lief the Lucky," to America in the year 1,000. Despite the news, the Trenton is ploughing through rough seas on its predetermined line of search. If no trace of the little group of mariners is found, the derelict will be investigated on the return trip.

A heavy gale was experienced Saturday and Sunday, with several thick flurries of snow and extra lookouts were ordered up. At night powerful searchlights are continually played on the water and every precaution is being taken not to miss the Ericson if it is still afloat.

A warning regarding the derelict has been broadcast to all steamers, which have also been asked to keep a watch for the little yawl. High winds and heavy seas so far have prevented use of the two seaplanes on board.

Lodge, always irascible with such people, refused hotly and denounced pacifists. One of them called him a liar. Lodge, much smaller and much older than the pacifist, promptly knocked him down with one swift punch.

One of the last "big moments" in Lodge's career, crowded as it was with achievements which won him public notice and fame, was his appointment by President Harding as a "special ambassador" representing the United States at the Arms Limitation conference which met in Washington in November, 1921. To Lodge was assigned the duty of presenting for ratification by the conference the Four-Power Pacific Treaty, designed to insure the peace of the Pacific. His speech that day he always afterwards considered his greatest piece of writing. His friends preferred his eulogy of Theodore Roosevelt, presented at memorial services for the former President, before the House and Senate.

Small, But Dignified Physically, Ledge's chief attribute was a look of commanding dignity. though he was small in stature. His curly white hair and pointed beard, nis erect, narrow-shouldered figure, with the coat always buttoned up closely, his sensitive hands, with the long fingers, gave him the look of a stern old aristocrat, as he sat in his chair in the Senate, or stood up to speak.
