

Life's Little Side Show

Mrs. Gertrude Turner Hudson (left) and Miss Margaret Hudson are shown getting warmed up in a Syracuse (N. Y.) police station where they were taken after being arrested for trespassing. They were found riding "blind baggage" of a fast train. It was cold, too, and they were glad when the cop "pinched" them. They only did it for fun, as they had two first class through tickets.

Following the blizzard which tied up traffic in New York, came a storm of sleet which rendered the streets of the big town almost impassable. Autos slied from side to side, while horses found it next to impossible to remain on their feet. Photo shows one of the many cases.

This is Mario Giglio, a cousin of Gigli, famous opera singer, and a protégé of Johnny Dundee who sent him to New York from Italy, believing that Giglio has the makings of a light-heavyweight champion.

Brent Glasscock, leader of the bandits who committed the mail robbery at Rockford, Ill., and who has just been sentenced to 12 years in the penitentiary, sent the rifle he used in the holdup, together with his and his wife's compliments, to Postmaster General New, who is shown in the photo holding the gun. Postoffice Inspector Rush Strimonds holds the gun case.

Rich Woman Works As One of Servants

Now she is back home in Lexington, regaling her friends with tales of Jones, the "h'odd man," and "H'Isabelle, the 'ead 'ousemaid."

Woman Tames Bandit

Miss Lillian Johnson, of Chicago, persuaded Donald McClugh, twenty-three-year-old farm hand, to give her his revolver after McClugh had held her up, drew from him a promise that he would quit a career of crime, and then took him to her home to end his three days' fast. Neighbors who saw the rough looking stranger were not so tolerant, however. They called police and McClugh was jailed.

Miffed

M. M. Belding, millionaire, was considerably miffed when Coast Guard officers off Miami, Fla., mistook his pleasure yacht for a rum-runner, and in order to stop it, took a few shots at it and him. He is now filing suit against the government. He is also a plaintiff against the government for publishing his income tax returns.

Shot by Lover

Miss Lora Palmer, 28 years old, pretty instructor of languages at the University of Wisconsin, was shot and probably fatally wounded by Frank H. Bernard, 32, whose love she had spurned. Bernard, a former student, met Miss Palmer in the reception room of the French House, a boarding and rooming house. Her refusal to marry him caused him to fire three bullets into her body. He then killed himself. Bernard lived at Hibbing, Minn., and divorced his first wife a year ago.
