Back Bad Since the Grip?

Has a cold or grip sapped your strength? Do you suffer constant backache, feel nervous and depressed? Then look to your kidneys! Many cases of kidney trouble are the result of infectious disease. The kidneys often break down under the strain of filtering disease-created poisons from the blood. That's why a cold or grip often leaves backache, headaches, dizzy spells and irregular kidney action. Help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A South Dakota Case

Mrs. E. E. Virtue, 709 Twelfth St., Rapid City, S. D., says: "My kidneys were disordered and my feet and ankles swelled. I also suffered from dizzy spells and nervous headaches. My back wasn't a bit strong and it often gave out when I did my housework. After using Doan's Pills my kidneys were regulated and the backache was relieved."

Gossip About Books and Authors

These English lady explorers: What do you suppose starts them off and are there as many as our reading makes us think? Lady Richmond Brown has just written of her adventures in UNKNOWN TRIBES—UNCHARTED SEAS (Appleton). She and her companion, F. A. Mitchell Hedges, went into the jungle depths north of the Panama Canal, a jungle region absolutely unvisited by white men. In order to save their heads from being added to the grim rows of mummified craniums which decorated the village, they posed as visiting gods, a myth they continued during their whole life among the savages.

The Board of Trade of Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, recently took steps to honor the memory of Walt Whitman who lived for many years in the Myrtle Avenue section. They are going to erect appropriate tablets and also maintain somewhere within the district a permanent Walt Whitman room devoted to the collection of Whitman's.

Perhaps you've heard of the wonderful intelligence of the elephants. Frank G. Carpenter, in his book, FROM BANGKOK TO BOMBAY, tells as a fact that an elephant piling teak will lift a log and lay it down with the others as though he had measured each piece. Sometimes he will stop and squirt at the pile and then butt or kick into place logs that are out of line. In some places, the animals work in gangs with boss elephants that keep the others up to their work by beating them with their trunks. They are given the best of care for they cost from $1,500 to $5,000 apiece.

How the liquor problem was handled by our fathers in New Amsterdam, is described in Harold Donaldson Eberlein's book, MANORS AND HISTORIC HOMES OF THE HUDSON VALLEY. They put an excise tax on wine and beer and they also looked after the behavior of the people and imposed a penalty for excessive drinking. When a drunken man was discovered, if the authorities could not find out who was the seller of the liquor that had caused the inebriety, they levied a fine upon every drinking house in the entire city.

"Hundred per cent. patriotism and confidence in Nordic superiority are the two most dangerous ideas in the world today, because they lead in exactly the opposite direction from that which civilization must take if it is to survive," says Herbert A. Miller in his new book, RACES, NATIONS AND CLASSES, published by J. B. Lippincott. "The fundamental objections to these ideas are, first, that they have no basis in fact, and second, that the innovations which they organized would have far-reaching and disruptive consequences."

"Both these ideas may be described as defense complexes which have sprung into focus with the first uneasy feeling that the old assumptions are no longer valid.

"In the last 400 years the people who are classified as Nordics have succeeded in getting control over most of the surface of the globe. The white race, led by this small fraction of itself, has come to feel that it has been destined to rule the two thirds of the human race

From Your Scrapbook

(Won't you look in the cook book, the ginger jar, behind the kitchen clock, wherever you keep those bits of poetry you particularly treasure, and send in one for us all to enjoy. We cannot use verse that has not been published, and please don't make your selections too long. Cutting down a poem often destroys much of its meaning.)

Mrs. Milton Perry Smith of Sioux City sends in the following poem with a little word of introduction which adds to the interest of the verse.

"I picked up this poem in the little thatched cottage, the birthplace of Robert Burns, in Ayr, Scotland, in June, 1922, and I have kept it by me ever since. It may be appropriate to use on the eve of the poet's birthday.

"I admit I was surprised at the authorship—Many thanks to the Tribune for publishing one of Burns' last poems, which came to light about a year ago, after having been cherished in the family of Jesse Lewars for many generations.

"Though Scotland boasts a thousand names Of patriot, king, and peer, The noblest, grandest of them all Was loved and cradled here. Here lived the gentle peasant prince The loving Cottar's King, Compared with whom the greatest lord Is but a titled thing.

"'Tis but a cot roofed in with straw, A hovel made of clay; One door shuts out the snow and storm, One window greets the day. And yet I stand within this room And hold all thrones in scorn, For here, beneath this lowly thatch, Love's Sweetest bard was born.

Within this hallowed hut I feel Like one who clasps a shrine. When the glad lips at last have touched The something deemed divine. And here the world, through all the years, As long as day returns, The tribute of its love and tears Will pay to ROBERT BURNS. —Robert G. Ingersoll, U. S. A.

The Troubles of a Book Reviewer

John V. A. Weaver, erstwhile critic of the BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE and also "Mr." Peggy Wood, in an amusing article in the February Vanity Fair tells why he gave up his job on the paper.

"Oh, that catch word, the personal touch! To analyze a book from a cool impartial critical standpoint and then express my views in style of 'brilliant informality.' To be bright without being flippant; smart without being smart alec. How many hours of agony have I spent in painfully wading through Harold Bell Wright or Zane Grey, determined to conquer my conviction that their novels are more or less tripe, seeking in them that something which assures them devotees by the million; endeavoring vainly to say a good word about them which might remove from my own conscience the uncomfortable suspicion of being a 'literary snob.'"

"And on the other hand, when confronted with the deep rhythms, the great tenderness of a man like Conrad, or wrestle with the long-legged creature, 'the average reader' some of the life that the Polish writer brought into my own soul.

"To be 'bright' and yet fair: That was the greatest problem of all. Many are the struggles I have had with myself to explain at decent length just why a certain piece of work was really bad, rather than crouch my teeth and dismiss a whole novel with the savage remark, 'James Oliver Curwood has written another story of the great Northwest. Why?'

"Then, there were the protests from members of the culture-trust who said I was an ignoramus because I did not like the products of the Dial-Little Review group; and the protests from dear old ladies, who, because I considered Cytherea not a bad piece of work and Ben Hecht a writer of some importance, accused me of forgering 'all that is rotten in literature.'

"Of course I do not mean to say that there were no oases in the desert. Even though my life, outside of the time spent writing and 'having a good time' was filled with books on the subway, propped against the water-bottle at lunch, in bed, before closing my eyes, yes, and even books carefully placed in the soap-rack during the bath—I do not mean that there were not numerous rewards, quite other than the occasional detection of an entertaining or worth-while story."

The honorable Toycho Kagawa says Japan wants only peace and isn't thinking about war at all. To prove it he shows that Japan has reduced her army.

That doesn't prove a desire for peace. It only proves Japanese intelligence. They know that in future wars, especially wars across the Pacific, armies will play no part. A thousand fliers, with the right kind of poison gas and bombs, will make the biggest army that ever existed ridiculous.

To know Japanese feeling, go visit her 17 airplane factories, working day and night, turning out 500 fighting planes each month.

John Jimson was very ill. He called in a doctor, who hemmed and hawed, and called in a second doctor. Then while John Jimson listened, the two quarreled about his case.

"You're wrong," said Dr. No. 1.

"I'm right," retorted Dr. No. 2.

"You're wrong," repeated Dr. No. 1.

Here the patient gave a groan and brought the medical men to a realization of the needs of the moment. But Dr. No. 2 couldn't resist a last swipe.

"Have your own way," said he, "but I'll prove I'm right at the post-mortem."—The Argonaut.

New Electricity Idea

A submarine cable in one continuous length of 2,700 feet had been recently laid across the Hudson river at Garrison, just below West Point, according to the Electrical World. The makeup of the cable and the method of laying it presented some features not encountered in everyday practice. The cable is to carry current from the east side of the river to the west side for local distribution in the immediate vicinity of Garrison. Power is to be transmitted at first at 2,300 volts with ungrounded star-connected transformers, and this will later be changed to 4,000 volts with the neutral grounded.

First Motor Car Accident.

It is cheering to learn that motor car accidents are not wholly products of this age. Because of the lack of driving skill possessed by pioneer owners, as well as the lack of mechanical perfection possessed by the earliest go-devils, motor car accidents were then in greater ratio to the number of cars in use than they are today. Read this account of the first accident—and give thanks that progress has been made in mechanical invention.

"It was an accident," says the Outline of Knowledge (J. A. Richards, Inc.) "that took the primitive motor car off the highway and put it on rails. In 1802 Richard Trevethick, while speeding along the road at the frightful speed of ten miles an hour, lost control of his steam carriage and ripped off a number of pairs of a fence. That accident spelled the doom of the early motor car. So dangerous a machine was not allowed to run at large. Even as late as 1863 England still had a law prohibiting any power propelled vehicle to travel over the highway at a higher speed than four miles an hour, and required further that the vehicle be preceded by a man carrying a red flag."

Julius Fieschmann, dead on the polo field at Miami, is another warning to men past 45. After that age, especially for those whose lives have been sedentary, the spirit is willing, but the heart is weak.

Theodore Roosevelt, like Julius Fieschmann, died unnecessarily. His rugged mind and will outlasted his physical strength. When he should have been building up blood quality and resting his heart, he went training with a retired prizefighter, running long distances along hot roads in heavy sweaters. That was a direct invitation to the death which soon came. The blood, weakened, could not resist germ attack.
