Cruel Old Custom

There was a time when "laughing" faces were actually manufactured to meet the demand of those who wished to be amused. Up to the end of the reign of James II, human "sculpture' work was carried out by roving tribes of gypsies called Comprachios, who were of Spanish origin. They bought and even kidnaped children, and prac ticed a science or art of human disfiguration.

Children thus treated grew up with an immovable and fantastic grin. They were an attraction at all successful traveling booths and entertainments until the custom was repressed by William III.

Seaweed as Food

Japan appears to be the only country where seaweed is cultivated for human consumption as cereals and vegetables are cultivated in other parts of the world, says London Tit-

Bits. It is said that some years ago, when portions of the coast were found to be denuded of marine vegetation, the Japanese government took the matter in hand and planted the devastated regions with suitable varieties, mainly red laver.

A crop of this in good years is worth as much as £35 an acre. Still more profitable for seaweed farmers is agaragar, which Japan exports in "What's the matter?" asked his large quantities for the manufacture of isinglass.
