

Buys Iowa Corn Over "Long Distance" to Feed Texas Cattle

"An order for six cars of corn for a good customer in Texas and none on hand," exclaimed an Iowa grain dealer. But this was not going to lose a nice sale for him. Quick action was necessary. Stepping to the telephone, he placed several long distance calls for Iowa elevators.

The quantity needed was purchased in less than an hour. Shipping instructions were also given by telephone and the corn was soon on its way to Texas.

Whether you buy or sell corn, hogs, groceries, matches, coal, or any other product, you can use "long distance" profitably.

We are eager to help you develop a plan of getting the greatest value from "long distance." Just call our Manager and he will be pleased to assist you.

SAMARDICK AND CREW BACK FROM FRUITFUL 760-MILE TRIP IN STATE

Robert Samardick and a bunch of assistants drove into O'Neill last Friday about noon and picked up five residents whom he charged with fracturing the prohibition law. Considerable speculation was rife as to who and how many would be caught in the drag-net at this time. Those who were picked up gave bonds to appear in Norfolk before the commissioner when called, which will perhaps be some time next week.

The following account of the raid was published in the Omaha Bee of March 31st and tells the story:

"Follow the Swallow" was a popular tune in Lynch, Nebraska, till last Saturday night, when Federal Prohibition Commander Bob Samardick and his men swooped down there and gathered in Frank Michaelson and Archie Pearsall.

They stowed them with malefactors from many other towns in the jail at O'Neill till the jail nearly overflowed. "We have reason to believe that one Swallow made dozens drunk," said Bob, Monday, on his return from the hard trip. He and his agents and deputy state sheriffs, in two cars, went out of Omaha last Thursday night, covered 760 miles, arrested 26 men and women charged with liquor law violations in 11 towns and returned to Omaha, all in about 60 hours. They slept but little.

Patrick J. Connolly, serving on a jury in district court, was one of five men arrested at O'Neill. The others were William Pinkerman, Frank Summers, Leo F. Bazelman and Arthur Wyant.

At Star they gathered in Floyd Crawford and left a warrant for the arrest of his good wife, Mary, who was absent from the domicile. Roy and William Olds were other Star citizens who received notice from Uncle Sam.

Near Naper, on a farm, two brothers, Gilbert and Leo Biele, were aroused from the hay at 11:30. Their aged father protested he could not spare them from farm work. It was their first offense, anyway, so Samardick took them to Butte, roused the judge and attorney from their beds. They lighted up the courthouse, the two men were arraigned, pleaded guilty and were fined $200 each.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith, of Knoxville, Mrs. Rose Barrett and George Janacek, of Atkinson, Lee McCoy, Eugene Dollarhide and Gray Hoffman, of Stuart; Thomas Strong, of Emmet; C. P. Gallon, of Bartlett, and Mark McClehn, of Ewing, were in the liquor register.

At Elgin also were found Frank Stoltz and Frank Webb, the latter 79 years old. Because of his age, Samardick did not arrest him but ordered him to present himself before the United States commissioner in Norfolk to answer the charge.

Doc Wilkinson, president of the Beaver Flats Game Protective Association, is confined to his residence in the Flats, suffering from a severe scalp would received when a crow dropped a rock on his head while members of the association were engaged in a crow hunt along Bloody Creek, just above its junction with the Calamas River, last Sunday. Several other members of the club are carrying bruises and contusions similarly sustained on the same hunt when the crows, driven to desperation, retaliated on the hunters who are waging a war of extermination against them in an effort to protect the game birds of the Calamas Valley.

The game protective association has been engaged in warring on the numerous crows inhabiting the section for several years, but only succeeded recently in locating the rookery, or homing roost, of the pests, which is situated on Bloody Creek. Scouts reported the rookery to be the home of thousands of the birds, which flew into it every evening and which left it at dawn every morning to prey upon the country for miles around. The several flyways through the hills bordering the valley were located and last Sunday the entire membership of the club lay in ambush along the flyways and began slaughtering the birds as they came in during the early hours of the evening.

The heavy bombardment created panic among the birds for a time, but soon several of the older ones and leaders of the flock, after a conference on the rock-strewn banks of the Calamas, flew back toward the rookery carrying pebbles the size of a walnut and larger. Flying high over the hunters and well out of range of the shotguns, they dropped the pebbles among the ranks of the hunters, just as Gen. Mitchell bombs a battleship, and scoring numerous hits.

Dropped from a height of several thousand feet, the missiles gained a high velocity before reaching their targets and would have inflicted fatal wounds had it not been for the heavy caps and clothing of the hunters. Other members of the enormous flock of crows were quick to emulate the examples of their leaders; and the fleeing hunters were pursued for several miles from the rookery by the relief of the feathered warriors.

Since the battle of last Sunday, it has not been safe for a gun bearer to enter the territory, the sight of a hunter afoot and with a gun being the signal for a rallying caw and a hurried onslaught by the bombing battalions. Members of the game protective association are armoring the tops of their automobiles and again will invade the vicinity of the rookery within the near future.

The New John Deere Engines

This is a special invitation to every one interested in a gasoline engine to come to our store and see this wonderful new line.

We have handled farm engines for years—we have seen dozens of different makes, but never before have we seen a small engine that comes so near fitting our ideas of a real farm engine.

The John Deere, we know, will appeal to you. It is an engine you can let the women folks or the boys run with complete confidence—it is an absolutely safe engine to operate.

All of the Working Parts Are Enclosed—no projecting shafts, no keys, no open gears on which clothing can be caught.

No worry about oiling — no grease cups to turn down, no sight feed oiler to adjust. After filling the oil reservoir, this John Deere engine automatically oils itself for days and days without attention. The operating parts get a thorough bath of oil the moment the engine starts, and the lubrication stops with the engine—absolutely no wasting of oil.

The John Deere is mighty easy for any one in the family to start —no triggers to adjust. Close the choker, crank it, and away it goes.

Whether you need an engine or not, come in and see this masterpiece in engine-building. You can't help but be enthusiastic about it. We are ready to demonstrate.
