BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

The state of Wisconsin, especially its skilled mechanics and farmers, should take an interest in taxation.

Well meaning enthusiasts plan to “put all the load of taxation on backs able to bear it.”

Their idea is to make big industries and big merchants pay all the taxes, by means of the inheritance tax, provide a big fund to pay wages to all unemployed, etc.

That sounds interesting, but the plan, as outlined will drive industries across the Wisconsin line into Illinois and other states. The Johns-Manville company, Palmolive soap and the great Simmons furniture concern have moved out of Wisconsin already.

If Wisconsin carries out too thoroughly a scheme that would drive industries and employers to other states, there will be plenty of applications for the unemployment allowance, and that allowance won't be as good as regular wages.

Two more of the biggest concerns in Wisconsin now plan to move out. If employers move, of course the workers will follow for they can't live forever on the unemployment allowance.

If the workers go, who will buy the stuff produced by farmers?

It is possible to overdo taxation, no matter how virtuous your intention.

Astronomers announce that three faint comets are visible in the heavens. The public says, “Oh, is that so,” and goes about its business.

Two hundred years ago that announcement would have sent millions to their knees and their prayers imploring Omnipotence not to allow the comets to destroy the earth.

We know now that comets follow a path marked out and as definite as that of the old-fashioned street car horse.

But the time for praying has not gone by any means.

A nation with our problems of bootlegging, juvenile crime, etc., needs help from somewhere.

“To convince others, be yourself convinced.” When Clarence S. Darrow of Chicago defends a murderer there is no hanging.

Yesterday Mr. Darrow, begging a rural jury to spare the life of George W. Munding, pleaded for “a poor, helpless victim of environment, heredity and the passion that has driven men mad since Cleopatra's day.”

As Darrow talked tears streamed down his cheeks, and they were genuine tears. Darrow is himself convinced, and so convinces his jury.

As for Cleopatra, of course she didn't drive Antony mad, whatever effect she may have had upon Caesar and others in her younger days. What Antony wanted from her were the vast treasures of Egypt with which to gratify his ambition.

The lady was unusually plain. Antony wasn't the first man to be content with imaginary beauty when he saw real money.

The wheat market “undertone” was better yesterday. Still doctors tell you that men speculating in wheat don't last long, the strain is too hard on the heart.

How the farmer feels following his plow along the furrow, wondering what speculators will do to him next, the doctors don't know. Doctors are more interested in wheat speculators than in farmers. Speculators are more profitable patients.

The atrocity in Bulgaria, more than 100 killed in the Sveti Kral cathedral by bomb explosion, was not an attack on the church or religion. Men who murdered Gen. Georgieff, in the street last Tuesday, exploded the bomb in the cathedral during his funeral, to kill his friends, and suc-

They do not carry on political warfare gently in those Balkan regions, or farther east.

Baseball box scores return to front pages of late editions. Three months hence, 20,000,000 Americans, young and old will be able to tell you all about the scores, who won, who lost, who leads.

If the same 20,000,000 were able to tell you all about something else, they and the country would be considerably better off.

Motor Cars Coolly in India.

Woodhull Hay, in Asia.

“Sahib, when is Henry Ford going to make petrol from water?” was the first question asked me by a native motor dealer when I reached India. It brought me face to face with one of the vital problems of selling cars in the East—the high cost of a manufactured product compared with the low cost of labor.

An Indian pays 1 rupee, 14 annas (50 cents) for a gallon of petrol and hires a chauffeur for 50 rupees a month. Petrol is expensive, and labor so cheap that for the price of 30 gallons he can get a driver for 30 days.

I remember seeing at Tinnevely, in the Carnatic, a bus that was running without any radiator. A cooile with a 5-gallon kerosene-tin filled with water was seated on the front mud-guard and poured the water into the jacket with the aid of a cocoanut shell. The owner could hire this cooile for a half year for less than the price of a new radiator.

An Indian can with the greatest difficulty be persuaded to spend an anna upon his car as long as it will run; and, when it stops running, he spends the minimum required just to make it run again. He treats his car as he does his bullock—drives it to death but will not kill it. The only thing he will spend money for in addition is petrol. I have never seen motor vehicles so badly, yes, cruelly, treated. Cars come into our shops—I saw one at Ranchi—without a drop of oil in the crank-case or a smudge

Pardon Them.

Vienna Kikeriki.

The two lawyers had disputed long and heatedly. At last one of them said “Sir, you are the biggest ass in the court!”

Upon this the judge intervened and said, “Gentlemen! You forget that I am present!”

of grease in the gear-box or differential. Candles are frequently perched in the head-lamps when bulbs and glass fronts have gone and strings are used to secure bonnet, hood, guards and even more vital parts.

Vanishing Terrors.

From the Baltimore Sun.

Of course you remember the white-headed boy in the third grade. He was old enough to be in the fifth grade, but he was a bad boy and wouldn't study and his parents could not do a thing with him. The teacher whipped him often, but it didn't seem to do any good. He smoked cubeb cigarettes and could spit through his teeth.

You were afraid of him, because he once threatened to bloody your nose which was pug and very close to your face; and when you saw him coming you took counsel of prudence and ducked into an alley. Or perhaps you endeavored to buy security by giving him an occasional jaw-breaker or stick of licorice. Ghastly little coward!

Well, the years passed and after a while you were in the sixth grade. How you had grown! Your feet covered vast tracts and your hands seemed almost too much for the tensile strength of your skinny arms.

You were no longer afraid of the white-headed boy. He was in the sixth grade, also, hanging on by the skin of his teeth; but Nature had destined him to be a runt. You felt a great contempt for him. He never knew when to invert or cancel, and in your heart you knew that you could lick him with one hand.

Things turn out that way as a rule. The things that affright us seldom grow. Today they cause dread shivers along our spines, but after a while we develop a little more intelligence or a little more courage, and then we look back and wonder that we ever were such cravens.

The Scientific Phase of Spanking.

From the Wichita Beacon.

Dr. Rudolph M. Binder, professor of sociology at New York university, defends the old-fashioned spanking as the most effective and perhaps least cruel of punishments for disobedient children. And, according to the professor, children with any initiative of their own are bound to disobey.

Spanking impresses naughty children when nothing else will, the sociologist declared. Being put to bed or being compelled to sit in a chair soon become common-places and lose their corrective power, he said, but spanking always is dependable. Dr. Binder recommends, however, that the child be induced to lie down of his own accord for the punishment instead of being dragged across his parent's knee, in order to avoid making him a victim of brute force.

The “jazz baby” of San Francisco, who killed her mother because her mother objected to the girl attending too many wild parties, was never spanked, she said.

Baby Peggy, the high-salaried but youthful film star, was spanked early and often.

We do not recall ever hearing of any criminal who thought that spanking contributed to his or her penitence, but a good many of them in their honest moments have said that if they had been spanked more they would have been better citizens.

And now that an eminent sociologist has joined the pro-spankers there is dignified backing to the movement.

If it becomes fashionable there will be a decided let-up in high school gin parties and pocket flask episodes and neurotic joy rides.

IRONING PONGEE SILK

Pongee silk should be thoroughly dried before it is ironed and then ironed on the right and wrong side.

Now That's Settled.

From the Progressive Grocer.

“I know every one of the tricks of your trade!” cried the angry credit customer to her grocer. “Do you think I have bought groceries 15 years for nothing?”

“Well,” said the grocer, “I shouldn't be at all surprised.”

MANY HOUSEKEEPERS TOO ILL TO WORK

How Many Are Finding Relief from Weakness and Pain. Mrs. Brandenburg a Notable Case

MRS. EMIL O. BRANDENBURG
651 57TH STREET, MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN

I took three. I had been treated by a doctor, but he gave me an iron tonic and that did not help me. It seemed that the tonic did not have in it what the Vegetable Compound did. That gave me the strength and ambition I needed and I have gained in weight. This year before I started to clean house I got four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and am taking it right along. I tell all my friends about it and how much good it does me. They can notice it because I have gained in weight. I weigh 118 now and do all my work myself again.”

—Mrs. EMIL O. BRANDENBURG, 651 57th Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Mrs. Earl's Recovery

Horace, Nebraska. —“I had terrible pains and backache, so bad that I could hardly move, and I would have to lie down at times. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I was so sick that I thought I would try it. My husband knew it was good as he knew a woman it had helped. It took all my pains away and I don't have any backache now. I do my own housework, take care of a few chickens and my garden, and have a little girl three years old to look out for. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and I will answer all the questions I can, if any one writes to me.”

—Mrs. ADA EARL, Box 23, Horace, Nebraska.

High Explosives Put Through Severe Test

The new high explosives, which found their first large scale use during the great war, are “insensitive”—i. e., reluctant to go off. So markedly so, indeed, that they are as safe to handle as cornmeal or baking powder.

This quality is extremely important, inasmuch as it makes them easy to deal with. To make them explode, a fuse is used.

They are mostly coal-tar products. From coal tar are obtained benzene and toluene, which are converted into high explosives by treating them with nitric acid. T. N. T. is an example.

High explosives purchased by the United States government are tested to determine their degree of sensitivity. Samples of them are set up and fired at with a rifle. If the impact of the bullet sets them off, they are considered unsafe and are rejected.

One of Them

Dinah was a product of New Orleans, a big, plump “yaller gal,” who could cook the finest dinners for miles around. One day a new butler appeared upon the scene, and Dinah's mistress noticed that she took a great interest in the man. At last her mistress asked:

“Dinah, do you know that new man?”

Dinah took another long and scrutinizing look and then slowly and reminiscently replied:

“Well, I dunno, Miss Alice; but I think he was my fust husband!”

Old Books Best Sellers

Book sensations of the moment are not, after all, the real best sellers. Figures compiled by publishers show that old-timers like “Little Lord Fauntleroy,” “Robinson Crusoe” and Dickens' novels are in reality the most popular even today, so far as sales and library circulation are concerned. In India it is said that more copies of “Robinson Crusoe” have been sold in the last five years than were sold altogether in the first five years of its publication.

Glad It Was a Girl

A Franklin couple had been awaiting the coming of the stork, anticipating the arrival of a boy. When the wonderful bird arrived it left a baby girl instead. Of course, it proved to be the dearest and sweetest baby ever brought to a Franklin home, and the father confessed a few hours later to his mother-in-law as follows:

“Well, do you know, I don't believe I ever could have stood the noise of a boy, anyhow.”
