

Not Well Since Three Years Old

Catarrh of the Ear Neighbor Recommended PE-RU-NA

The experience of Mrs. J. C. Dacus, 1621 Booker St., Little Rock, Ark., was not an unusual one. It was in fact a repetition of what has happened in thousands upon thousands of instances. She had a running condition of the ear from the time she was three years old. In spite of treatment it persisted and became very offensive. One day a neighbor recommended Pe-ru-na and La-cu-pia which had relieved his wife of the same trouble. Mrs. Dacus used three bottles of each of these quick acting remedies and reports that the discharge and offensive odor are both gone. Her disease was one of the very many forms taken by Catarrh and is known as chronic Otitis. Wherever the catarrhal condition is located Pe-ru-na reaches it. May be purchased any place in tablet or liquid form.

Gigantic Bridge

A bridge half again as large as New York's Hell Gate bridge is shortly to span the harbor of Sydney, Australia. It will allow the largest liners to pass below it, and will carry four railroad tracks, as well as roadways and walks. The chief feature of the bridge will be a single arch of 1,650 feet span; the total length, including approach spaces, will be 3,770 feet. The headroom for ships will be 170 feet at high water, and the top of the arch will be 450 feet.

In too much disputing truth is apt to be lost.

Radio Broadcasting

There are about one thousand radio broadcasting stations throughout the world, of which 538 are in the United States, which also has approximately 18,000 licensed amateur transmitting stations. Further, according to the best data available, in the United States there are approximately eight million radio receiving sets in use, of which about five million are "tube" sets and the balance "crystal" sets.

FOR A FEW MINUTES DOCTOR PULLMAN THOUGHT HE HAD ANOTHER JOB IN SIGHT—BUT JOE GREENING HAD THE SITUATION TOO WELL IN HAND.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE.
One set of lawyers will tell a jury that a girl 17 years old, named Dorothy Perkins, should be hanged for shooting a man. Another set of lawyers pat the girl on the head, call her "poor little Dot Perkins," and say she ought not to be hanged.

The prosecution will endeavor to show that this girl of 17 "had lived an evil life," meaning that she had been shamefully treated by various men, and therefore ought to be hanged.

That sounds like urging the hanging of a cat, because it had been kicked around the gutter when it was a kitten. In the case of a kitten, the harder it was kicked, and the madder it was, the more a decent man would sympathize with it.

Concerning the dispute about the origin of man this may interest you. When anaesthetics were first discovered and surgeons performed operations without inflicting pain, there were violent protests from fundamentalist clergymen. "God wishes men to suffer," they said, and to enable them to escape pain with chloroform or anything else, is interfering with God's will."

Fundamentalists were all agreed until some medical modernist hit upon a happy reply. He said to clergymen that wanted miserable patients to have their legs cut off while fully conscious:

"If you criticize anaesthetics, you are criticizing God himself. When he performed the first surgical operation on Adam, taking out one of Adam's ribs, and making it Eve, his companion, God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam. That's exactly what we scientists do when we give anaesthetics before we operate." The fundamentalists couldn't exactly answer that. So now, when you have your vermiform appendix taken out, the doctor causes a deep sleep to fall upon you, and fundamentalists have forgotten that they once objected to it so violently.

One hundred twenty five devoted women of America, all ardent prohibition workers, will land in England today, to tell the British they also should become "bone dry."

The Daily Mail, biggest circulation in England, wonders why "people cannot learn to attend to their own business" and calls the 125 "dry" ladies, "busybodies."

Any American can assure the Daily Mail that prohibition is not necessarily bone dry.

The price of gasoline is going up. New York pays a 1 cent "boost" beginning today. Oil as it comes from the ground is getting scarcer. The increasing number of automobiles demand more and more gasoline. Wise men of Wall Street tell you that if you buy the right oil stocks you will get rich.

Of course you will. But those that know which are the right oil stocks are not going to tell you. And those that have the wrong oil stocks for sale will push them at you. Don't gamble.

As for the rest of the stock market, brokers tell you sincerely and truthfully that the general list is going up, unless it goes down.

French and Belgian francs dropped yesterday, and a bond that pays 7.13 per cent, is no "conservative investment." And if Europe ever repudiates such bonds the owners will be told, "don't complain, for you are usurers."

Belgium wanted to borrow $50,000,000, more! American financiers gladly supplied the money. Wall Street's reporters write: "Belgium's loan snapped up in record time."

The loan, paying 7.13 per cent, supplies a pleasant profit for the financiers that handle it. Just what will happen to little people who ultimately hold the bonds remains to be seen. They want 7.13 per cent. For awhile, they get what they want. If they want safety, they might better invest in the United States.

Health and Property.

From the Arkansas Thomas Cat. Health is a property, and the property, like any other property, improves or runs down, according as it is cared for. Health is the most valuable property in the world and should have much of every man's attention. The possession of good health helps you in your business. Poor health and good business don't make a good pair.

Thousands of people visit Words, a little town on the outskirts of Berlin, on two Sundays at "Apple Blossom Time" to drink apple wine and see the apple blossoms.

"Why," asks a newspaper man, "do you say it would be less dangerous for the Shenandoah to go to Spitzbergen and hunt for Amundsen than to go from Lakehurst to Minneapolis and back?"

Answer: Because at this time of year crossing the Atlantic, with the prevailing winds helping, going on to Spitzbergen from England, with the Patoka waiting there as a base, and exploring the Arctic ocean a few hundred miles north, would be simple. It would only mean flying the big Shenandoah in the midsummer climate of the arctic, at no great distance from her base.

A trip from New York to Minneapolis and return through the zone of midsummer thunderstorms will be sufficiently safe, as hellum doesn't explode or burn. But it would be more dangerous than a trip to Spitzbergen and on north at this season.

Mr. Davis, acting secretary of war, tells West Point cadets there is no danger of militarism in America, and that is true. There won't be any American militarism. But if this country doesn't soon get an adequate fleet of flying machines, there may be some foreign militarism up in the air above us, and that would be considerably more unpleasant than the home-made article.

Dr. Hibben, president of Princeton university, tells 88 young graduates of Adelphi college that he isn't sure the prohibition law is a good law. If it isn't, says he, it should be changed, not broken.

This expression of doubt from a distinguished editor coming in daily contact with hundreds of young men is important.

Between Perth and Derby, West Australia, two cities 1,500 miles apart, what is asserted to be the longest regular passenger air service in the world, is operated by the Western Australia Airways Limited. There are six intermediate calling points, and a weekly schedule is maintained. The service, which is well patronized, has the outstanding advantage of having neither railroads nor fast mail steamers with which to compete, and has flourished almost from the time of its beginning. Western Australia is one of the most thinly populated white countries in the world.

Lost His Temper.

From Everybody's Magazine. The irate customer returned to the photographer with the prints of the pictures he had taken.

"Do I look like this picture?" he stormed, shaking it in the photographer's face. "You made me look like a monkey! Cook-eyed, and a chin like a bull-dog. Do you call that a good likeness?"

"The answer is in the negative," sweetly replied the photographer. For teaching children, a typewriter has been invented in England that prints pictures of objects with the first letters of the names of the objects.

"The George and The Crown"

By Sheila Kaye-Smith (E. P. Dutton & Company, $2) Just as De Wolfe Hopper always will be identified with "Casey at the Bat" and John Hayes with "Jim Bludsoe," regardless of any later expressions of their talents, so always will Sheila Kaye-Smith be identified in my mind with "Joanna Godden." That was a book, which now, after several years, I remember in most accurate detail, and which for months I found repeatedly in my thought and conversation. Joanna herself, will always be a living person vigorous and unique, and unforgettable. With memories of Joanna keen in my mind, "The End of the House of Alard," was a jolting letdown, so pallid and fumbling in comparison with the earlier book. Now, in "The George and The Crown" there is a swing back to the sturdy strength of "Joanna Godden," though the story does not have, to my mind, the emotional intensity of that book, nor any character to compare with Joanna.

The author has a power reminiscent of Thomas Hardy, in her depiction of simple, rustic folk. She tells of Dan, unlettered, crude, but so soundly good as to reach nobility, and she makes his problems universally significant. She writes close to the soil, and achieves a fundamental solidity, that is completely divorced from the frittling inconsequence of many of the questions brought up with such solemnity in our fiction of the day. Dan's problems were of fidelity, love and fatherhood. The simple democracy of his relation to Ernley, and the rector rather gives the lie to the idea of the strict caste system which we, in this land of the free, believe prevails in England. This book is worth 10 at least of the books depicting "smart" society, and the clever repartee bandied about by the sophisticated.

One of the earliest mentions of cockroaches is that made by Sir Francis Drake in 1587 when he captured the San Felipe, which was badly infested with this pest.

From the Stars and Stripes. Mose Jones: "I'd lak to git off next Saturday to go to my uncle's funeral." Employer: "When did your uncle die?"

Mose Jones: "Lawd, boss, he ain't dead yet!" Employer: "Then how do you know his funeral is going to take place on Saturday?"

Mose Jones: "Cause dy's gwine to hang him on Friday."

Electrical currents set up by a mixture of air and water cause rust which destroys $300,000 worth of metals every year, recent investigations indicate.

Whimsy of Fashion Has Checked Anemia

The tight corset has disappeared and will never come back, because science has declared against it, Prof. W. W. Dixon of Cambridge university asserted recently in a lecture under the auspices of the People's League of Health. Twenty years ago the London hospitals were visited regularly by great numbers of girls and women suffering from anemia, most of them workers in factories and offices, the Philadelphia Ledger points out. "The kind of anemia which the doctors of those days had to contend with has entirely disappeared," averred the lecturer, "and the reason is that tight-laced corsets are no longer worn by the young women of today who are interested in keeping their health."

Entombed for Eight Years

The amazing adventures of a Russian soldier who was accidentally imprisoned for eight years in the cellar of a ruined food depot near Vilna, was revealed by workmen breaking up the ruins of the building. He was entombed in the cellar when the depot was blown up hurriedly by the czar's troops in 1917. He was found alive in an indescribable state of dirt, with hair reaching to his waist. During all the eight years he kept himself alive with food in the cellar, but he died three days after being rescued without saying a word.

Chinese Diplomacy

Chinese soldiers, who have just dealt with a bandit band, have a delicate sense of strategy. They told the outlaws that they could enlist in the army, and when the trustful blackguards came into town on a railroad train the soldiers killed most of them and wounded the rest before they could leave the cars. That was real diplomacy. Remaining bandits will not be so likely to respond to invitations to undertake more peaceful pursuits.—Baltimore Sun.

Plan Land Conservation

The combined area of the Superior National forest, the largest national reserve east of the Mississippi, is 1,268,538 acres. Of this total 32 per cent, or 411,000 acres, are privately owned. A movement is now on foot to acquire by purchase or gift this privately held land so that the government's holdings may be consolidated. The forest is well known for its attractive wild life and water courses.

Nothing New About That

"I heard today," remarked Mrs. Jones as she came in from shopping downtown, "that we are going to have a broadcasting station in the village." Mr. Jones put aside the evening paper. "That's nothing," he replied, "there's been one on our front porch for years." "Our front porch! Where?" "Those two rocking chairs on the shady side."

WAS NOT FIT TO DO HER WORK

Dreadful Condition of Mrs. Fullerton's Health Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Clearfield, Pa.—"I cannot begin to tell you how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me in every way. Before taking it I couldn't stand on my feet without pains running all through my whole body from my waist down, just like threads pulling. I was not fit to do any work. My mother got me to try the Vegetable Compound and I have found great benefit, and I not only recommend it for such troubles, but to build up the whole system. I have used it for most everything that gets wrong with me. When I begin to feel nervous and irritable I don't stop long in getting a bottle of the Vegetable Compound if I haven't got one in the house. It gives a fine appetite and makes a new woman of me. You may use this testimonial in my own town or anywhere else, and I will answer any letters I receive."—Mrs. KUSH FULLERTON, 825 S. 2nd Street, Clearfield, Pa.

If you are suffering from nervous troubles, irritability, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. For sale by druggists everywhere.
