

HELPED THROUGH CHANGE OF LIFE

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during This Critical Time—Benefited Greatly

Baltimore, Maryland. — "I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help me through the Change of Life and for a broken-down system. I had been complaining a long time and dragging along had tried other medicines which did not help me much. I read in the newspapers of the Vegetable Compound and after taking a bottle felt better. I did not stop with one bottle, but took it through the whole critical time and am now practically a well woman. I have two daughters whose health was very bad before they married and I was worried about them. I got the Vegetable Compound for them and it helped them, and after they married it also helped them in bearing their babies. This is a great and good medicine for all complaints of women, and I recommend it to all." — Mrs. L. GINGRICH, 1875 N. Gilmore St., Baltimore, Maryland.

Tennis Old Recreation
So far back as 1427 we hear of a famous female player of tennis, one Margot, who "played both forehanded and backhanded very powerfully, very cunningly and very cleverly, as any man could." The expressions "forehanded" and "backhanded" have their historic value, for they seem to indicate that rackets were introduced into the game before 1427.

Feel All Out of Sorts?

Is backache spoiling your summer? Do you get up lame and stiff—feel tired all day? Are you so nervous and worn out you cannot rest or relax? Look, then, to your kidneys! Stagnant kidneys allow poisons to accumulate and upset the whole system. When this happens you are apt to suffer backache, sharp pains, soreness, stiffness, dizziness and annoying kidney irregularities. Help your kidneys with a stimulant diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are used the world over. Ask your neighbor!

A South Dakota Case
Harry Porter, carpenter, 38 Centennial Ave., Deadwood, S. Dak., says: "I had a lame and aching back which made it hard for me to do any stooping. My kidneys acted irregularly, also. I used Doan's Pills and they soon relieved me of the pains and other signs of kidney complaint."

Another Fish Story
Here's a fish story from Pittsfield, Mass. Water was running slow from the faucet in Joseph Pfeiffer's house, so he went to the cellar to examine the pipes. At a cut-off in the pipe he found a pickerel, which he removed with a pencil. The fish passed five miles through the water main, and of course it was a whopper.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE
While this nation discusses Darwin, evolution, William Jennings Bryan, Professor Scopes, science, theology, etc., Mother Nature proves that she has not "theories" and her eternal laws work without fear or favor.

On the same evening in New York lightning struck the Museum of Natural History, the home of evolution, with stuffed monkeys of all kinds purporting to prove it.

The same lightning storm set fire to a hospital and struck and shattered the great cross on St. Patrick's cathedral.

The church, by erecting lightning rods and taking out fire insurance, has long recognized the fact that providence never visits or alters its laws, not even in favor of itself.

Once, when Ingersoll was to speak in a small town, lightning hit a church next to the hall in which he was to speak. Ingersoll was jocosely about it, saying, "somebody is a bad shot." He might better have preached about the impartiality of eternal law.

Eleven scientists and an army of lawyers will fight on the famous Darwin-Bryan-Scopes-evolution-monkey case. The scientists should include a professor of embryology.

If the jury could see in pictures the gradual evolution of a human being and one of the higher apes, before birth, it would be at least interesting. Every gorilla is born with two club feet. Every human being at one stage of its development has such feet. But it goes on developing before it is born, and, except in rare cases, arrives with human feet.

It's a terribly complicated question, and everybody ought to be glad Mr. Bryan is going to settle it, once and for all.

The Morning Post of London thinks "the United States is going to the dogs. It has too much money, too many laws, and its crime wave is a bad symptom."

We can assure our British brothers that some of our many laws interfere little with our much money. Money doesn't notice the laws very closely, and some of the laws, prohibition, for instance, don't disturb the possessor of money.

You are reminded of the colored man who said his master was not disturbed by the numerous mosquitoes because in the evening his master was so "toxified" that he didn't notice the mosquitoes and in the morning the mosquitoes were so "toxified" they didn't notice his master.

In spite of all our defects, clearly visible to our British brothers, we are at least building up this country.

S. W. Straus, whose institution is the biggest of American builders, tells real estate men in Detroit that the American building program this year will amount to $6,000,000,000, $250,000,000 more than last year.

We not only build, but rebuild. Substantial buildings in the United States are torn down every year to make room for bigger buildings. Enough of them to provide homes for many millions.

Twenty thousand parading students in Peking cry, "death to the British," and demand war on England. If those young Chinese could put deeds back of their words, Europe would worry.

If some young leader, from Russia perhaps, could organize the Chinese, for a few years, patiently build up a gigantic air force, training fliers to run 25,000 airships, and then start toward Europe with poison gas and explosives, the map of the world

A Discouragement to Tennis.
From the Boston Transcript.
The neighbor of a man noted for his extreme thrift saw him coming down the road on a week day dressed in his Sunday clothes.
"What's up, Jim?" he called out.
"Why the glad rags?"
"Haven't you heard the news?"
"News! What news?"
"Triplets!"
"Oh, so that accounts for—" began the neighbor, when the frugal one interrupted him:
"Yes, that accounts for my wearing these clothes. What in thunder's the use of trying to be economical!"

PROHIBITION.

Henry Ford.
We believe that if the opposition to prohibition were analyzed it would be found that it was mainly alien. We believe that every true American is for it heart and soul. We believe that if prohibition were to be put before the nation tomorrow there would again be an overwhelming flood of public opinion in its favor. Although the friends of prohibition may not be so aggressive as its enemies, they are firmer in their convictions.

It is not in the wide open spaces that the defiance of the prohibition laws is the most prevalent, but in the crowded urban centers where alien influence and alien eagerness for money-getting are at work.

After its five years of trial, prohibition is not a failure. It is the people who have neglected to correspond with it who are the failures. If it took Christianity hundreds of years to obtain a footing, why should anyone consider five years sufficient for a tryout of the greatest reform since the introduction of Christianity itself? The good that has already come from it infinitely outweighs the evil, and the evils that are, do not arise from prohibition but the failure to practice it.

might change.
It would be different from the old days, when the Mongolians came marching from the east on shaggy little ponies and on foot, and Attila boasted, "when I stick my spear in the ground the earth shivers."

Europe, that once narrowly escaped the rule of the Moslems, may one day experience Asiatic rule. In the end, fortunately, intelligence rules the earth, and European races modestly assume that they possess the intelligence.

The total estate of Senator La Follette amounts to $39,000. Practical politicians will ask, "what was he thinking about? Was that the best he could do after being governor of his state three times, and senator of the United States four times?"

Just a few little "concessions," as the practical men call them, would have enabled La Follette to leave $1,000,000 instead of $39,000 to his widow.

Mr. Harris, American consul, back from Singapore, tells the world that Great Britain controls all the rubber industry of the east. He says, "even in Sumatra, where Americans own about 1,000,000 acres of rubber lands, the Britons rule the rubber situation."

Englishmen are good business men, they understand the use of the "trust" in building up the British empire. We should not criticize but eagerly learn from them.

"The Spirit of the Hive"
One of my husband's numerous cousins is a naturalist. His field is the study of "coleoptera," which means beetles. I should like to have him read "The Spirit of the Hive" and tell me what he thinks of it, though I'm afraid his cold and scientific spirit would be so repelled by the flowery language applied to the humble bee, that he would destroy for me my novice's delight in this surprising mixture of nature lore, philosophy and rhapsody. Just the mere factual information about the individual and social organization of the bee, is amazing. The division of the various classes of bee society into worker, drone, queen, and the workers' further subdivision into Camera Diplomacy.

From the Illustrated Leicester Chronicle.
"Will you have something to drink?"
"With pleasure," replied the photographer's customer.
When the photo was taken the sinner said: "But what about that little invitation?"
"Oh, sir, this is just a trade ruse of mine to give a natural and interested expression to the face," replied the knight of the camera.

Spiders' webs spun on frames placed near large spiders by natives in the South Sea Islands are transparent in water and after being used as fish net are also employed to catch butterflies, moths or even bats.

Melon Hat

The watermelon hat is a summer novelty, not to be taken too seriously or recommended for formal wear. It is of silk in light and dark shades of green arranged to make the crown a perfect copy of a melon. The brim is of the lighter silk, corded. The crown is bound with a ribbon band of watermelon pink.

water carriers, pollen gatherers, comb makers, breathmakers (these last by rapid rotation of their wings keep the air of the hive fresh) all boken a finesse of detail that makes our human society seem like the clumsy block construction of an awkward giant.

The most interesting part of the book, but one which our cousin would scorn, I fear, is when Mr. Sharp starts philosophizing about the world and God. He likens the social organization of the bee, with its ruthless sacrifice of the individual to society, to a socialist's Utopia, and muses upon what a cruel, bloodless affair such an organization would make of life. He ponders: "in spite of centuries of bee-keeping, men still arm for war. And it seems now to be largely about oil, as if oil, not milk and honey, were the emblem of the Promised Land! How much sweeter a little garden flowing with milk and honey than a ranch in some vast wilderness flowing with crude oil. A little garden, I say, in Hingham, humming with bees and fragrant with flowers, than a world thundering with armies and stinking of blood and oil."

If every boy or girl, who ponders upon the question of creation and sex could read with understanding this book of nature lore, he or she would go fortified with a precocious and impregnable armor of knowledge and reverence.

"When."
When mine hour is come
Let no teardrop fall
And no darkness hover
Round me where I lie.
Let the vastness call
One who was its lover,
Let me breathe the sky.

Where the lordly light
Walks along the world
And its silent tread
Leaves the grasses bright,
Leaves the flowers uncurled,
Let me to the dead
Breathe a gay goodnight.

A Dubious Compliment.
From the Boston Transcript.
The new chaplain of a Scotch asylum was complimented one day by an inmate who said, "We like you better than any other chaplain we have ever had."
"I'm pleased to hear it," said the gratified man. "May I inquire what it is that has made me preferred by you above my predecessors?"
"Well, ye see," replied the inmate, "we think ye mair like oorsels than any o' the others."

Timepiece That Talks

Is a New Invention
A clock that speaks the time every fifteen minutes has been invented. This speaking timepiece, it is said, differs very little from the ordinary clock. It has the same kind of face and standard works, with the exception that to the minute shaft is fastened an automatic lever and cam which is actuated every fifteen minutes by the minute wheel. This lever, in turn, works a second lever which is attached to a drum carrying a phonograph film.

This action of the first lever upon the second starts an electric motor causing the film to move. When this occurs the stylus of the phonographic reproducer is acted upon and the time is vocally announced. The phonographic reproducer is fitted with a small horn that intensifies the sound. The clock also has a repeating device.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Women Good Judge

A Philadelphia judge, with a close approach to the wisdom of Solomon permitted a woman who had been beaten by a drunken husband off and on for 30 years to pass sentence upon her unworthy spouse. The woman started off by telling the man that she ought to send him up for a year. He begged for mercy, took the pledge, promised to pay his wife $15 a week out of his $22 salary, and was placed on probation for a year. The woman was not a half-bad judge, either.—Health Culture.

Praising England

Gunga Das, the Indian lecturer, said in an address in Chicago:
"Some of my fellow countrymen attack the English, but we all have to admit that the English have improved the Indian woman's status."
"Take the suttee. By the law of suttee the Indian woman mounted her dead husband's funeral pyre and was burned to death."
"In pre-English days, to put it in another way, the Indian widow was cremated—now she's cremated."
