

Recovery From Influenza Hastened by PE-RU-NA

Mr. C. A. Allen, R. R. No. 2, Bondurant, Iowa, gives testimony to the healing power of Pe-ru-na. Influenza left him much run down in health with catarrh of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes punctuated with attacks of asthma. He writes:

"While recovering from the influenza I was so weak I could not gain any strength for two months. The latter part of the winter, I bought six bottles of Pe-ru-na and began taking it. My weight increased to 175 pounds, the most I ever weighed.

My usual winter weight is 155. If you can use this letter for any good, you are perfectly welcome."

Such evidence cannot fail to convince the rankst unbeliever of the merits of Pe-ru-na.

An application for a position as teacher in Butte county, South Dakota, has been received from a woman in Wyoming. In part, the application says: "I will introduce myself as an old-fashioned old maid school teacher. I can ride horseback, am not afraid of rats, mice or rattlesnakes. Will be pleased to receive a position in the wildest section of your country. I do not smoke cigarettes, use profane language nor drink booze. Am so homesy that the men stay clear away from me."

"Flaherty," he demanded, "why did you dump your hod of bricks on your friend Nolan?"

"Ye see, judge," explained the offender, "OI once told Nolan that if he was hard up for money to come to the building where OI was workin' and OI'd do him a favor, and when OI saw him comin' along the street, dead broke, OI dropped the bricks down on his head knowin' he had an accident policy."—Forbes Magazine.

Here is a novel idea in neckties. A wide velvet ribbon follows the oval cut and outlines the opening in front before it ties in a loose knot. Paris loves these little touches, and is putting them on her loveliest creations.

TODAY

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

A 1-year-old filly daughter of the great race horse, Man-o'-War, sold at public auction for $50,500, breaking all price records for a yearling filly more than $21,000.

The filly as an instrument of gambling is worth it, because horses breed true to a great extent. Colts from this mare may be worth $100,000 each, or more. It is not so with human beings and their breeding.

War between France and the Riffs goes on with unpleasant details. There is little improvement in 'war as you watch it progressing through the centuries, from the great catapults hurling rocks to swift fliers dropping poison gas.

French airman swoop down low after dropping all their bombs, and open fire on the Riffs with machine guns. Riff marksmen, excellent shots, bring down an occasional Frenchman from his flying machine.

Not troubled by civilized customs or international usage, when the Riffs capture a French flier one of the proceedings is "to burn out the stomach," which they do ingeniously.

This makes it certain that every Frenchman will sell his life as dearly as possible. He could do that, anyhow.

Vienna forbids the formation of occult groups, and makes it illegal to train mediums for conversation with spirits.

Austrians have had enough trouble on this earth recently, without borrowing trouble from the world of spirits. Nevertheless, as long as the mediums do not obtain money under false pretenses, it seems harsh to forbid their traffics. Interfering with any kind of religion is dangerous. Never sit on the safety valve.

An invention from New Zealand sends high explosives through the air in torpedoes guided by wireless.

These air torpedoes operate as do water-borne torpedoes used to destroy battleships at sea.

And the New Zealand air torpedo can be launched against an enemy, flying ship, battleship or city 100 miles away and wreck the object against which it is steered by wireless.

The United States should get that.

Chinese Student in Politics

From the Springfield Republican

Wherever the Chinese come under American influence they take eagerly to baseball and do well at it, but in China the students seem to give their time, when not at their books, to politics and parades. An old resident in the Far East suggests that matters would be much less troublesome if they had learned to expend their surplus energy on athletics. He likens their demonstrations to those of the British suffragists a dozen years ago, which the government found hard to deal with.

Organizations With Other Interests Soon Lose Caste With Politicians

From the Wichita Eagle

One of the reasons which has persuaded the American Federation of Labor to renounce future official indorsements of third party political movements is confirmation by its leaders, in the last campaign, of the rather curious fact that a body of men organized for one purpose can not be diverted to another purpose. This limitation is known to all men who organize and yet they are continually forgetting it. The men with the most highly developed sense of organization are the politicians. Their prosperity is grounded in keeping an organization grouped around the generality of a party name and they know it. Any departure, however slight, from that generality is not regarded by them as safe. Time after time they are under the necessity of departing from it by extolling to the heavens some single person, the party nominee, but the minute they detect that the person extolled believes himself to be stronger than his party, then the politicians begin backpedalling in their praise of him. This was one of the chief causes of the memorable revolt of the republican politicians against Theodore Roosevelt. Organizations not primarily political can be controlled measurably and for a short time for political purposes. But when the primary purpose of the organization is permanently subordinated to a personal, a political or any other aim, the organization begins to dissipate. The leaders of the American Federation of Labor, who are past masters in the art of organization, therefore decided that the action of the federation in the national campaign of 1924 shall go down in history as a mere temporary excursion, and not a practice.

Invention and be ready with it. The motto of this country should be: Be friendly with the whole world. Be ready for the whole world.

Edward Rector, a Chicago lawyer, leaves $2,300,000 to education. Important and interesting. He establishes annual scholarships for every high school in the state of Indiana. That's a fine bequest by a first-class American citizen. Work while you live and leave your money when you die to help the public school system, and you need not worry about the future of the United States.

It is all tied up in the public schools, the children and the teachers of those schools.

Health authorities in London would tear down the vilest slums, replacing them with low priced flats, American style. A meeting called by the ministry of health at Limehouse is broken up by the slum dwellers. They shout "liar" at witnesses describing the horrible conditions under which they live, and say they want no change.

That's the trouble. When you seek to improve conditions in pig pens or slums, you must first change the character of your pigs and your slum dwellers before you can make the change.

The hundred greatest statesmen that the world has ever known, brought back to life and put to work in the Congo region for 100 years, couldn't, in that time, make out of the Congo natives anything but Congo natives, about as they are now. You remember how many of the black slaves rebelled against freedom, also how many white women rebelled against woman suffrage.

There is great power in confidence. Fifty millions of Americans are insured for $64,000,000,000. If they all died at once, there wouldn't be in all the world, enough money to pay the insurance bill. But the 50,000,000 know that when they die their $64,000,000,000 will be paid, because they die one at a time.

The Tobacco Cure

From the Alexandria Times-Tribune

A man claims to have discovered a weed that will cure the tobacco habit. We knew about that a long time ago, though, we don't know the name of the weed. It is being sold right here in our town in the form of a 5 cent cigar.

The Reason,

From Forbes Magazine. "But, why do they make the apartments so small?" "That, madam, is so the tenants will have no room for complaint."

VANE LOVE

You had thought me steadfast, true, Resolute and staunch, you say But there came a lover new And my heart was turned away.

Were I not so fickle, dear, You'd not won me with such ease, If a lady's fancy veer, It will veer with every breeze.

Love like mine's a weather-cock That the slightest wind will change. If I vary, waver, mock, You should never think it strange.

He I loved before you came Was a charming fellow, too, I do not deserve your blame If I turn away from you.

Flattery's wind will still prevail To deflect me—west or east, And which lover blows the gale Doesn't matter in the least.

—Lois Whitcomb in Life

Former Slave Earned Fortune

From the Columbus Dispatch Chicago papers recently devoted columns of space to the death of George Jackson, a wealthy negro lawyer. His fortune had its cornerstone in coal.

Prior to the Civil war, Robert Gordon was a negro slave belonging to a Virginia miner—there was no West Virginia then. In those days slack coal was thought unsalable. Gordon begged the "leavin's" from his master, barged it down to Cincinnati, sold it and kept on selling it until he accumulated $1,000, with which he purchased his freedom. He introduced slack coal on the Cincinnati market.

Later Gordon moved to Cincinnati, where he engaged in the retailing of coal, investing his money in real estate and became rich. Jackson was a youth whom he educated to be a lawyer, and who later married Gordon's daughter.

Sounds Fishy.

From the Boston Transcript. "Pa, why is a catboat?" "I don't know, my son, unless it is to give the dogfish something to chase."

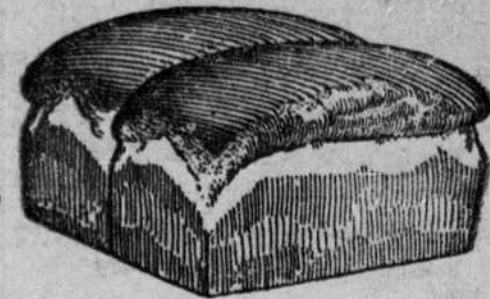

Thousands of flowers and plants of southeastern areas of the United States have recently been added to the collections of the New York botanical garden in Bronx park. These specimens were gathered by Dr. John K. Small, head curator of the garden's museum, in a 7,000-mile exploration. They included about 5,000 dried plants mostly of the flowering varieties, and hundreds of living plants, representing such groups as the spider lily, the iris and the orchid, as well as many other little known types from various critical groups now being studied by the garden's botanists.

Food Combinations It

Is Wisdom to Avoid

The recent death of Chin Hong, a Chinese laundryman of Baltimore, after a luncheon consisting of cherry pie and milk, calls attention strongly to the fact that certain food combinations may be highly dangerous, though the component parts are harmless enough individually. Chin Hong's death is not attributed to indigestion but to blood-letting practiced by Chinese doctors, but his luncheon made him seriously ill.

Cherry pie and milk make a combination dangerous to Americans as well as Orientals, though a few persons are able to assimilate them successfully. A similarly dangerous dietary grouping is that of bananas and alcoholic liquors, especially if the bananas are not fully ripe.

It is best, in any event, to avoid either of these food combinations at any time of the year.

Scouts and a Dog

In Portland, Ore., lived an old lady with no companion but a dog, and no income but what she could make from her sewing. Two patrols discovered her, and for nearly a year the boys supplied their new friend with groceries, chopped up wooden store boxes to keep her fuel buckets filled and generally looked after her needs. Recently the little old lady died, and, according to report, her guardians sorely missed her.
