CELIA ITEMS.

(Too late for last week.)

The Gottchalk Bros. marketed three loads of rye, Monday and Tuesday, hauled by the community truck.

A straw hat circulated around Thursday crowding the season tremendously, and the next day it was 90 in the shade.

Ralph Reese was in this community Thursday, looking for a chance to buy a team of horses. Alfred Cassidy took home a team of colts from Peter Judge, the same day, to break for the use of them.

J. V. Johnson hauled a few things belonging to Guy Loder, who is staying with Lawrence Smith living about eight miles north of Verdigris, over to that place Wednesday. Henry Smith, living in this community, went along as pilot and gave the information that it was about 25 or 30 miles over there which Johnson found quite correct, only that was the distance up and down, not across, which was about 60 more and a lot of them are hardly fit for a Ford to travel over, let alone a white man. A few historic places were passed, such as Meek, Mineola, Star and Knoxville on the way back a better road was taken through the Jim Crowe place, passed Opportunity, O'Neill and J. K. Ernst place, the last named place being the most interesting. The Ernsts' are a fine hospitable family, but not as large as it has been, as all of their three and half dozen children, except two, have left the parental home for comfortable homes of their own. Besides having raised many children, the Ernsts' have raised several thousand bushels of potatoes in much less than many years. Knowing they were a hospitable family, the weary travelers turned in and asked for a square meal, which their daughter, Myrtle, done her darndest to prepare and give them. While Ralph, their son, offered to milk the cows, which Johnson had in the truck and was hauling back to Johnnie Smith, another son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith. Having had their inner man, the hog part, some call it, satisfied, the journey was resumed, the cows delivered and home about 10 p. m. Mr. Smith lived in northeastern Holt county several years ago close to Star and still has a brother there, but it was Johnson's first trip into what might be called the real hills of Holt and Knox where you go over the hill to the next one.
