Paul Poiret, in the Forum, range is the history of the short I have been in America three times. My first visit was in 1912. As you know, they began to wear short skirts in 1913. Green vegetables lightly cooked or help, too. But already investiga-tors remind us this is not enough and some of them declaim "eat" note cereals!" On a vegetarian diet we can too easily forget calcries completely. In our passion for vitaminy and minerals, we may even forget that meat protein is more easily assimilated than vegetable protein, and that it therefore admirably balances a meal. We may even be safe in suggesting a decided curtailment of meat consumption.

More and more psychic and nervous factors assume importance in the etiology of chronic intestinal stasis; at the same time diet becomes less important. Alvarez indeed emphasizes the mental factors. Boles declares that the psychic factor and the nervous control are the most important causes of constipation, and that bran and fruits and vegetables, high in cellulose, may be absolutely bad. Instead he advises as a start a diet of potatoes, rice macaroni, strained cerealas, and white in lieu of whole wheat bread We simply come back once more to the same conclusion which writers on real scientific nutrition can never labor sufficiently. No form of routine dictotherapy, whether for constipation, nephritis, or normal health, can ever be completely successful. Such diets are always a great convenience to the physician, but are often likewise a very dras-tic injustice to the patient. Indi-vidualized nutrition in health and in disease can alone be effective for highly complex and strikingly indi-

Dilustrating the lengths to which some men are willing to go to make money. Self-respect can hardly live in a healthy man who gets every cent he has by whining for it on street corners, accepting rebuffs and insults by the cozen. And self-respect, for the average person, is the one thing without which life is unendurable. Yet this beggar's scale of values was so topsy-turvy apparently, that he not only was able to dispense with his self-respect bit was able to invent a new one, where by the words Bowery bum" from a re-

Haven't you heard that sort of philosophy before? Has a certain rich oil magnate who concealed wrongdoing by public servants and lied to a Senate committee been dropped by any of his clubs or lost caste with his associates? Not he.

He is very rich; We are pretty familiar with that viewpoint. The idea that practically any course of action can be justified if it brings in the cash is widely held. It is easy enough for us to see the absurdity of it when the central figure is a panhandler. We are more apt to miss the point ,though, if it is a multi-millionaire.

"Pitchmen" Have Ousted the Old Time Peddlers

Earl Chapin May in the Century Magazine.

In almost every city and hamlet on this continent may be found a mountebank typical of a small army of itinerants known in their argor as "pitchmen," because they pitch that corresponds to tents in erstwhile empty stores, in coorways, on street corners, at celebrations or at fairs; they lighter briefly, then are gone, after the manner of Mr. Longfellow's Arab.

These pitchman neost a venture some and picturesque of all small merchants, have their own code and own vernacular. They wander across the continent selling whatever their market wants but tayon a committee and metal specialties. They are particularly fond of a remedy alleged to come from rattlesnake fat, affilioush and mustard and accounts to the committee of the committee o oil of mustard and eucalyptus oil are

"Hot spots" are those in which good trade can be regular, ly depended on. "Cold spots" are just the opposite. Flukem Workers

An "oil man" specializes in snake oil and his sample bottle is the "worker bottle," which may or may not contain the same formula as that for which the "standing natives" in the pitchmen's aud'ence pay in legal currency.

Most pitchmen are honest, earnest merchandizers who brave the elements and the unsympathetic local tradesman in efforts to earn a livelihood; but trickery is sometimes resorted to. Hence the "flukem worker" who, with his homemade mixture of mercury and other chemicals, "silver plates" a copper penny of a radiator as a demonstration, then sells his preparation and departs for other fields, for within the ensu-ing 24 hours the "silver plating" vanishes. The "white stone worker" is equally fond of travel, for a "white stone" is an imitation diamond made of glass, backed with mercury. It "flashes." but is not a precious, though it is an expensive stone to one who purchases. THIS IS NEWS
