VOLUME XLIX.

O'NEILL, NEBRASKA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1928.

NO. 24.

Herbert Hoover Elected President

A republican land slide that extended from coast to coast swept the democrats aside and retained the republican party in power in the election last Tuesday.

The result was a shocking event to the most optimistic republican. Herbert Hoover carried all but eight of the states of the union which gives him 444 electoral votes. The states that remained in the democratic column were Rhode Island and Massachusetts, of the New England states, and Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina of the southern states, which have 87 electoral votes.

No such high-water mark ever has been reached in any previous presidential election. Even in 1912, when the Republican strength was split between Taft and Roosevelt, Wilson had only 435. Harding had 404 in the sweep of 1920 and Coolidge 382 four years ago.

A very wide prevalence of split ballots was apparent over the country in the fact that many states that gave Hoover a tremendous majority also gave democratic candidates substantial majorities.

Hoover carried New York State, the home of the democratic candidate, by about 100,000 while Franklin D. Roosevelt, the democratic candidate for governor, was elected by about 100,000.

Republicans have captured four democratic seats in the senate and seven in the house and their chances are excellent for increasing these gains in the closely fought contests still being counted in wavering states.

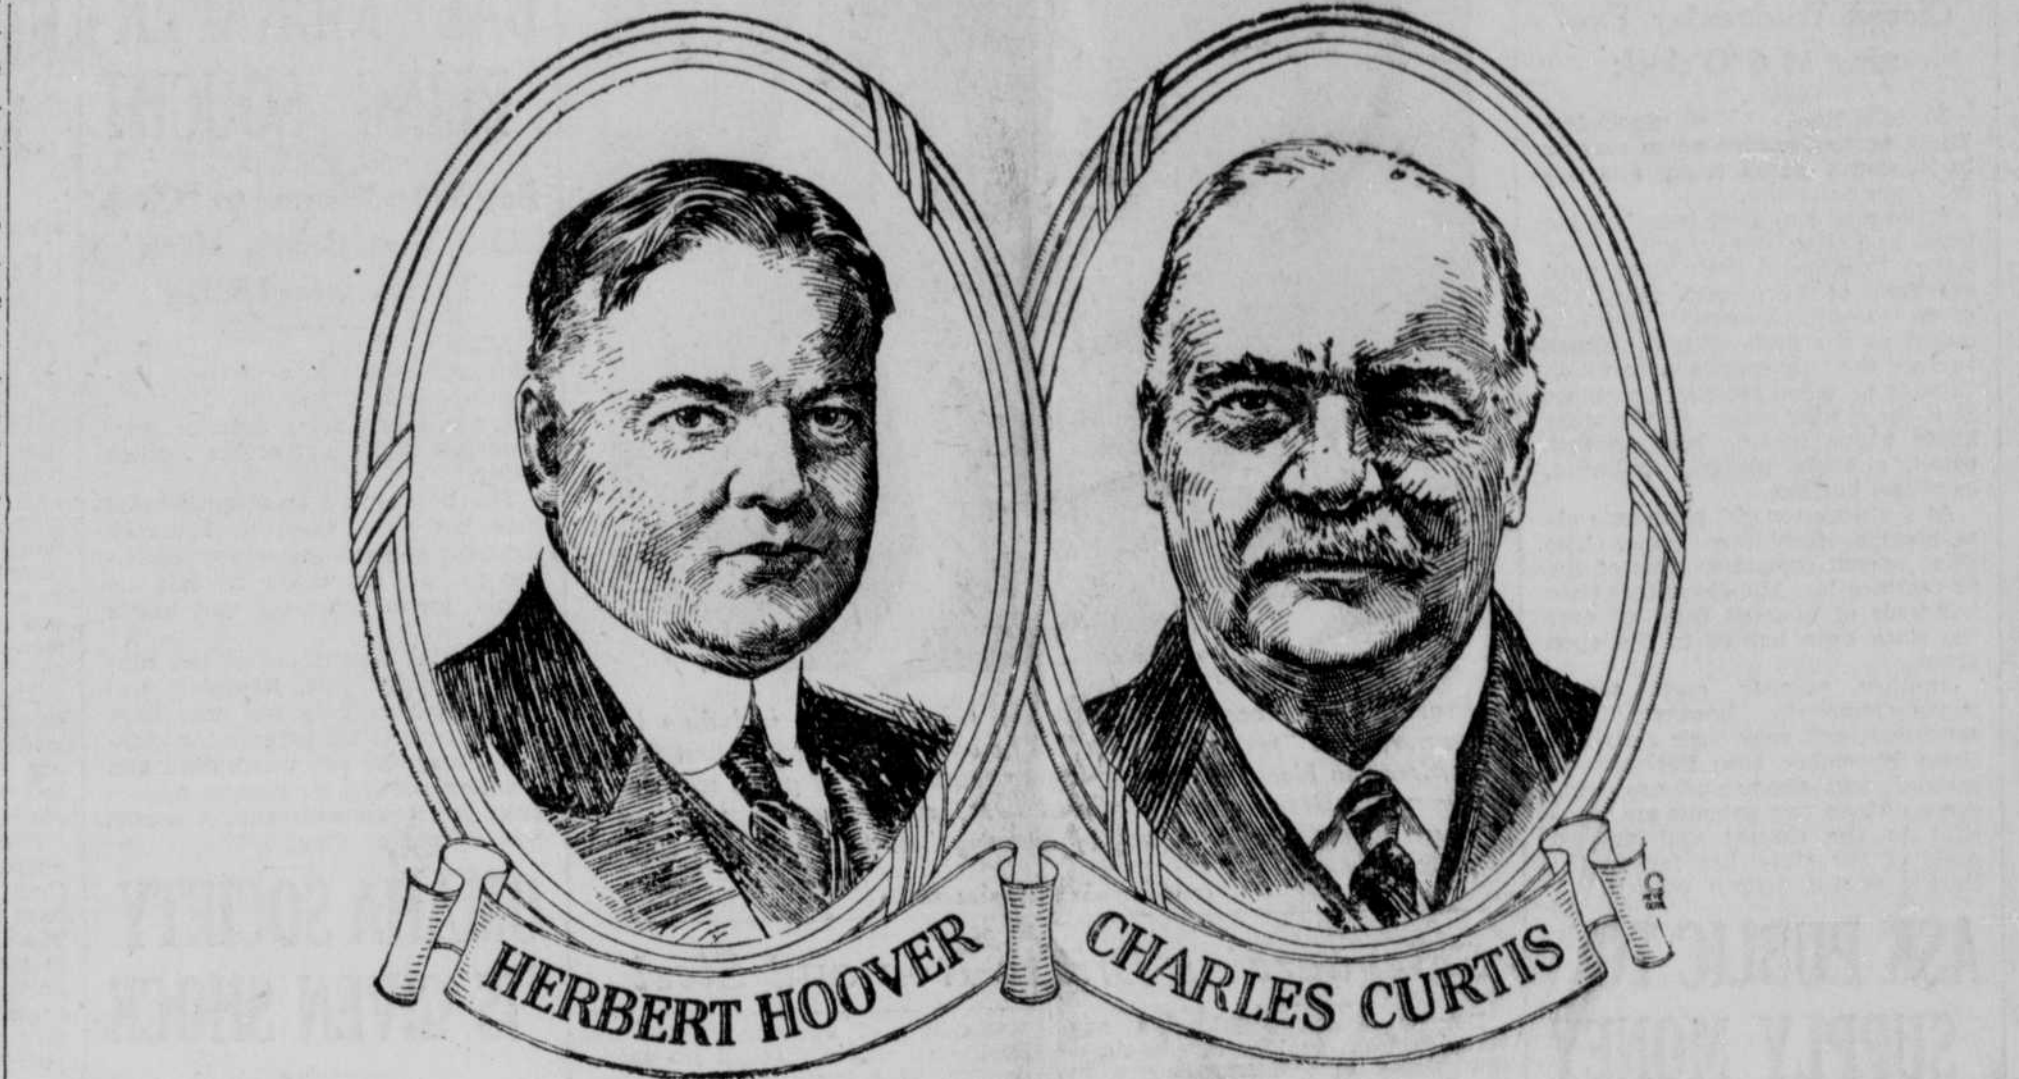

There were five democratic senate seats which hung so narrowly in the balance that the result could not be announced twelve hours after the polls had closed. Inasmuch as not a single republican seat seemed still at stake, it was reasonable to assume the republicans have been able to kill the insurgent balance of power in the senate and have strengthened their majority to such an extent that their control cannot be questioned. The doubtful house contests were being even more closely fought, some resting among 100 disputed votes. doubtful classification attached itself to eight republican house seats and twenty-four belonging now to the democrats, it was likewise a reasonable assumption that the republican gains in the house might reach as many as twenty of the democratic chairs.

In this situation the lineup of the senate stood:
Republican, 52; democrats, 36. Doubtful democrats, 5; vacancies, 2. The house lineup was: Republicans, 239; democrats, 164. Doubtful, 29. (Republicans, 7, democrats 22).

LARGEST POPULAR VOTE.

While the electoral votes for Hoover reached landslide proportions it will be found on the final tally that Governor Smith polled an unprecedented popular vote—in fact, he received more individual votes than any democrat in history, whereas his electoral total probably will be the smallest of a generation.

Judge Robert R. Dickson carried every county in the district. He piled up a majority in the district that will total about 6000 when the mail votes are counted.
