A "Chamber of Death" test is your guarantee of FLY-TOX efficiency. The FLY-TOX "Chamber of Death" is a small room in which live, healthy insects are turned loose. They are strong and lively. As they fly and buzz around inside the "Chamber of Death," FLY-TOX is sprayed inside. Less than a teaspoonful is used. Almost at once the buzzing stops. Within five minutes all is still. The insects are dead. This test shows you how quick and positive FLY-TOX works. Just what you need for those pesky flies and mosquitos that bother you now. FLY-TOX is positively harmless to people. It has a delightful perfume-like fragrance that pervades a room like delicate incense. It is stainless. FLY-TOX was developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research Fellowship. Every bottle guaranteed.—Adv.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

"NO TURN ON RED"

Some towns do not allow either right or left turns on the showing of the red traffic signal. They bear the legend, "No turn on Red."

Many cities, especially large ones where it is imperative that traffic move without cessation in as many directions as possible with safety, cars drawing up to the extreme right hand curb are allowed to turn to the right.

These confusions in direction and law are troublesome to the driver, and will some day probably be eliminated, but in the meantime the best plan is to be alert and awake to whatever command is discernable.

In cities, if a right hand turn is to be made the car should be slowed down, brought almost to a standstill and the corner turned at a speed of not more than eight miles an hour. As pedestrians have the right of way at such a turn, since they are crossing at the red light signal which, to them, means safety, the driver of a car making such a right turn should not try to "honk" them off, or run them down. Slowly nosing in with a slight warning from the horn is the only safe and considerate method of approach.

The lane of travel for this right hand turn should not be blocked by a car if no turn is anticipated. By running up into position and sitting there the passage is blocked and traffic which could otherwise be disposed of is blocked up for many yards in the rear.

The city driver should not forget the small town regulation and be quick to respond to the command of "no turn on red." In many large parks where a traffic policeman is stationed, as in Central Park in New York, left turns are made to the left of the officer on signal. A marked lane for such turns is left vacant and the turn made when the signal, "Left Turn Go" is displayed at the signal post.

Until all traffic commands are made universal, watch for the command of the particular community in which you are driving and be quick to obey.
