EDWARD A. KEELER BURNS FARM HOUSE

Edward A. Keeler, aged 76 years, set fire to the Woeppl farm house, ten or twelve miles south of Inman last Sunday night and watched it burn to the ground. Keeler has been making his home with his sons and at other places in the vicinity of Inman for some time; during the past few months Keeler has been batching in the Woeppl house.

The neighbors arrived too late to save the building but made a search for the old gentleman, thinking that perhaps he had burned to death.

After the house burned down, the old gentleman walked to O'Neill, a distance of about twenty miles, and gave himself up to Sheriff Duffy, telling him that he wanted to go to the penitentiary. He was arraigned before the insanity board Tuesday and later taken to Norfolk.

The residence that was burned was a large eight room house; about 35 bushels of rye were stored in the one room; there was no furniture excepting a few pieces that were loaned to Mr. Keeler, which he removed before starting the fire.
