

Lonely Hearts

WILBERT has a heart of gold. Will no one tell him what's the matter—why girls turn pale, and gracious matrons freeze at his approach? Yes, we will. This has gone far enough. Get a new pipe, Wilbert, and break it in gently, thoughtfully, with Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite smoking mixture. When the curling wisps of its fragrance surround you, everything will be changed, Wilbert.

How to Take Care of Your Pipe
(Hint No. 5) To make your pipe sweet from top to heel, smoke all the pipe load when you break it in, or fill the bowl half full the first few times so that the heel, and not merely the top, will be broken in. Wonderful Vital Force in Every Work of Art

Art does not exist for education. What we call art is a fragment of life that has miraculously survived the centuries. Whose life no one can say with certainty, nor how it came here. For in art, as in procreation, life is the first and only essential. Whose life is no matter, the life of the artist, the life of the people that made the artist, the life of the natural forces that is the people. The only thing that matters is the intensity of the life and our awareness of it.

The true function of a museum of art is nothing less than to make us aware of that life, tear down the veil that time and changing manners conspire to interpose between art and us, and bring us into immediate contact with the immense vital forces that in every great work of art lie imprisoned.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drug store has the genuine, prescription product.

Naval Powers May Confer When Peace of World Is Threatened

From Christian Science Monitor.
Statesmanship has finally broken through the fog banks of parity and tonnage at London, and the naval conference stands at the dawn of great achievements.

The sign of success which has just emanated from the London negotiations is the news that the American delegation is prepared to welcome and support the proposal for strengthening the Pact of Paris with an agreement that a breach of peace is threatened. Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy are already committed to such a course by virtue of their obligations under the league covenant. It remained only for the United States to add its great weight to this important undertaking.

At a single stroke the conference can be rescued from a preoccupation with the mechanism of war to a constructive study of the mechanism of peace. The problem of tons and guns must be faced, but it can better be faced when the need for their use is reduced to the minimum. An agreement among the powers to consult in the event of threatened war is one further step which can be taken to attain that minimum.

The significance of the news that the Americans will warmly support a treaty of consultation—a treaty which has ample precedent in traditional American policy—can hardly be overstated. It is the direct answer of the American delegation to the demand of France that further security must be had before any substantial cut can be made in naval armaments. Unquestionably this agreement offers the key to the greatest success at London.

Thus far the insistence of the French upon a navy of 724,000 tons has seemed to thwart all headway. These claims were embarrassing to Great Britain, which would have chosen to decrease its requirements were it not obliged to take into consideration the strength of other European fleets. In a word, Great Britain would be forced to increase its naval armaments to meet the French requirements; the United States would be required to increase its building program to meet Great Britain's; Japan would be obliged to build up in ratio to the United States, and Italy would proceed to expand its navy to meet the French. Thus the spiral of debate went round and round, and more armaments seemed to be the only result. Manifestly, France holds the answer, and, rightly or wrongly, necessarily or unnecessarily, France is convinced that greater security must precede a reduction of its claims.

This security is at hand. A treaty of consultation accepted by the nations represented at London and open to the signature of every party to the Pact of Paris will assure not only France, but every signatory to the peace pact, that a threat of war, wherever it may occur, will not be looked upon with indifference by the nations of the world. Such an agreement does not commit any nation to specific action, but it does provide every power with the opportunity of exerting its fullest influence against war. Such a mode of consultation will serve to illuminate the facts of a conflict and to equip the treaty renouncing war with a valuable means of pacific settlement.

Canada Looks to South America As Air Travel Opens New Areas

MONTREAL.—The growth of South American trade possibilities since the introduction of air transport is the subject of an optimistic economic survey prepared by the Royal Bank of Canada.

Signs have been plentiful in recent months that Canadian finance and industry are looking more and more toward South America as an export market, and also as an outlet for surplus investment funds.

The survey emphasizes recent improvements in transportation facilities, particularly by air, in Brazil, Argentina, Peru, Colombia and Venezuela. In Argentina, it is stated, geographical conditions have availed the development of an extensive rail system surpassing that of any country south of the United States.

Colombia and Peru are cited as examples of swift progress in air travel. This promises to tap rich and extensive territories heretofore retarded by their mountainous character. The survey forecasts important economic advantages to Brazil through the growth of air travel, because of the long distances separating points to be served.

Brazilian rail facilities, for example, have tended to center around Rio De Janeiro and the coffee producing area of Sao Paulo. Thus far coastal ships have carried most of it all has been distilled a certain good. People understand the nature of a tariff and the motives of those seeking governmental favors of that kind better than they ever did before. Never has so much unashamed self-seeking been exposed. Never has the inevitable weight of tariff taxes upon the consuming public been so clearly shown. No enemy of the protective system could have done so much to discredit and destroy it as its own friends have done.

This is one explanation of the republican defection in the Senate. Not only insurgent republicans but a few from the eastern states who of the traffic between these two centers.

The quickening of outside interest in South America's prospects is described as the chief result of aviation development in that part of the world. "The mail system has been transformed," the bank finds "and inland districts of Colombia and Peru need no longer wait weeks for mail, and Rio De Janeiro and Buenos Aires are only seven or eight days distant from New York and London."

A Great Man's Wife.
From Milwaukee Journal.

We went up to see William Jennings Bryan one time in the hotel suite where he was stopping as correspondent for a newspaper at a national political convention. His typewriter was going in the next room and while we waited Mrs. Bryan, very much at home, showed us some new pictures the photographers had just delivered, and in compliment to the great leader, had bound. "Wasn't it nice of them?" Mrs. Bryan asked, and turned over the pages:

"Here's the one the papers wanted. But here's one I like. It shows Mr. Bryan as I always remember him when—" and so on.

The glimpse was enough to suggest Mrs. Bryan's life—filling in for her husband, taking of him, making those at home whom he would wish received kindly, his words her creed, what he did her instant view of what it was right to do. Her career, joyfully pursued, was to be the wife of a great man.

And that evening she saw a throng that was pushing and hauling to get into an overcrowded hall open up as if by magic to make a lane for her husband, and at his word, "Easy, boys, Mrs. Bryan is with me," for her, too. Presently in the great hall, she heard the rhythmic drum of men's voices! "Bryan! Bryan! Bryan! Bryan!"—refusing to let business continue until this man, her husband, not a delegate, not a candidate for the nomination, lifted his hand and promised in that golden voice that presently he would speak.

His "inspiration," some like to say. But that is not the word for Bryan needed no spur to his ambition. Rather, as many men of talent, he needed the reassurance of appreciation in his home; the comfort of having the needs of his career his wife's first thought; the applause that came to him, her reward. We read of men who reached fame without this second of their ambitions and their work at home. How many are there of whom we never should have heard or read about but for the reassuring, refreshing, re-creating force of the great home inspiration?

Chicago's Dictator.
From Columbus Dispatch.

So they took the $50,000,000 and now Chicago has a Mussolini. For the hand that holds the pay check rules the world, and Silas H. Strawn has a grip on the purse strings. He is chairman of the citizens' committee that is digging up the coin to cash tax anticipation warrants to meet the payrolls of police, firemen, school teachers and other city employees. The money is not dumped into the city and county treasuries all at once, but is being fed as required. And Mr. Strawn can shut off the golden flood any time the city council starts kicking up its heels.

The politicians tried to bluff the committee into providing the funds and asking no questions. But Mr. Strawn said nay, nay! The money rolls in only during good behavior. It was a case of take the castor oil or leave it, and the council took it, for there is no fun working for a city with an empty treasury.

It will be interesting to watch Chicago in operation under a dictator with a golden sword.

Q. How many community trusts are there in the United States? O. P.

A. There are now 75.

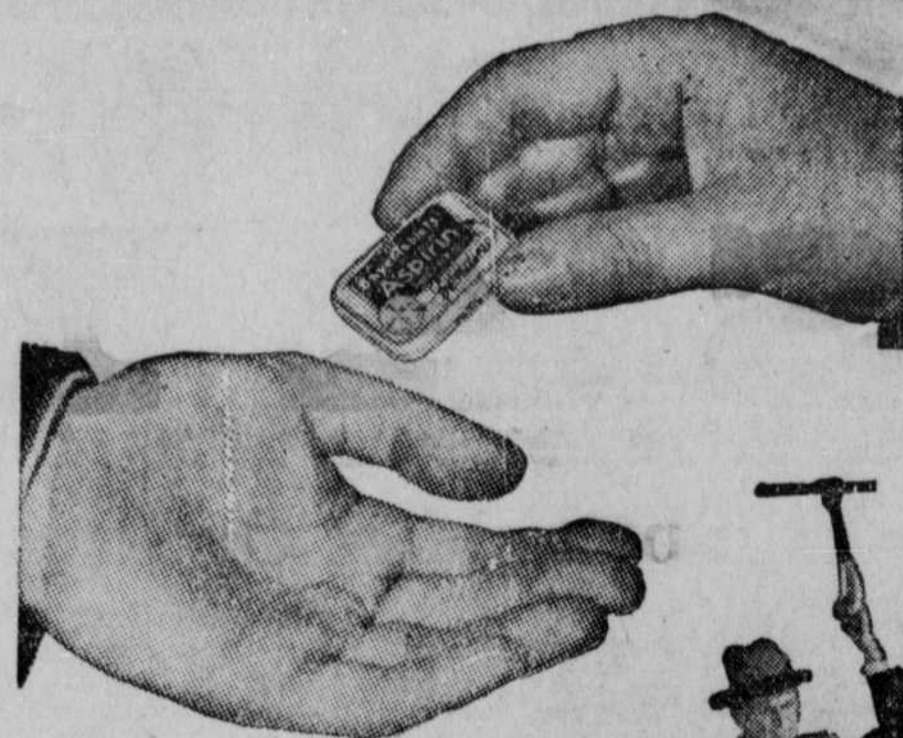

have been most regular of regulars have been unable to stand up and vote for duties, like those proposed on sugar, which would infallibly have meant heavy and unescapable taxes laid upon American housekeepers.

The consumer has had representatives to defend him. What may be the fate of the bill no one can say, but it already has demonstrated in the eyes of the whole country that such legislation is all compact of log-rolling and selfishness.

For any BABY

We can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother does not change to stronger medicines as the child grows older. Castoria is readily obtained at any drugstore, and the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature that appears on every wrapper.
