

New Jersey's New Elevated Highway

Here is a birdseye view of the new three-mile elevated highway which connects the Hudson Tunnel from New York with the three New Jersey cities—Jersey City, Newark and Kearney. The road is regarded as one of the greatest engineering accomplishments of its kind in the world. Its completion ends four years of intensive labor. It cost $18,000,000 to build and was designed by Col. H. W. Hudson.

Col. Robins—"Reynolds Rogers"

After the Horse Had Gone

Yes, it looks like a perfect illustration of the old maxim about locking the stable door. A locksmith is shown changing the lock on the manuscript case at Columbia University, from which thieves purloined the original manuscript of Sir Walter Scott's "Guy Mannering." The treasure was one of the prized possessions of J. Pierpont Morgan.

As Death Rushed by Speed Demon

Frank Sues probably wouldn't give a thin dime for his chances, nor would anyone else who witnessed this scene, when this photo was made during an auto race at Los Angeles. The car in which Sues was traveling at terrific speed is shown in the remarkable "shot" as it cast two wheels, throwing the driver out of the cockpit. Sues slid for 50 feet across the track in the path of oncoming cars, but miraculously escaped injury. A few minutes later he was at the pits looking for another car to drive.

Confessed Slaying

Seventeen-year-old James Varecha, of Chicago, is shown after his arrest as he calmly admitted that he slew Frank H. Jordan in a hold-up, and half an hour later abducted and attacked Lillian Henry (inset), niece of former Police Commissioner John Alcock. Besides these crimes, Varecha, who recently escaped from a State epileptic institution, confessed several other hold-ups and shootings.

Macon Nearing Completion

The newest air leviathan-to-be, the dirigible Macon, is shown as it nears completion in the giant construction hangar at Akron, O. It is a sister ship of the United States airship Akron. When the Macon takes the air about five months from now, the Navy will possess the two largest and most modern airships in the world.

Floral Coiffure

Here is the very latest thing in coiffure, introduced by lovely Anita Page, screen actress, and taken up in a big way by the entire film colony at Hollywood. A fillet of flowers is worn across the back of the hair, ending over each ear. The coloring of the floral decoration is chosen to match the evening gown.

Seeks Freedom

Beautiful Claudia Morgan, daughter of Ralph Morgan, celebrated stage and screen actor, who has begun suit for divorce from Lawrence B. Cummings, of New York, at Hollywood. Cummings and Miss Morgan were married in 1931, after a six-weeks' romance while she was acting in New York.

Leaving Harvard

Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, who recently announced his resignation as the twenty-fourth president of Harvard University, having held his post for the last 23 years. Dr. Lowell will retire as soon as a successor is named. It is believed that overseers of the university will not stray from the ranks of the alumni when selecting the next president.

A Trunkful of Fun

But it takes a trunkful of food to satisfy this distinguished exhibit at the National Pet Show in Madison Square Garden, New York. Little Gloria Ludlow and Rudy Miller are offering coffee and cake to Rosie, the elephant. But Rosie isn't keen on coffee, peanuts being more soothing to her palate.

Visiting Robins

Miss Elizabeth Robins, sister of Colonel Raymond Robins, Chicago dry leader, is shown as she arrived at New York from Europe, enroute to Asheville, N. C. Colonel Robins, who had been missing since early September, was recently found there suffering from amnesia. At first he failed to recognize his wife, but he later recovered his memory.

Back on Hollywood Scene

Clara Bow, famous as the "It" girl of the screen, seems to be her old self again as she is pictured dining with her husband, Rex Bell, also of the movies, at a popular Hollywood rendezvous. Miss Bow recently returned to the films after a long absence, following a nervous breakdown.
