CATTLE THEFTS KEEP HIM BUSY

Product of the Southwest Watches Brands at St. Louis

East St. Louis, Ill. — (UP)—Frank L. Campbell never stole a cow in his life, et cattle "rustling" gave him a job he has held for nearly 50 years.

He is brand inspector for the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association at the National Stock Yards here. It is his job to check the brand with the name of the shipper and pick out any cattle that do not bear the brand of the shipper.

Campbell estimates he can recognize at sight more than 5,000 cattle brands, tell the name of the owner, and give the location of the ranch.

Raised in Southwest Campbell was raised in the great southwest in the days when cattle "rustling" was to the open spaces what gang rackets are to the big cities of today.

The racket was operated by organized bands, headed by powerful robber chiefs. The penalty for cattle stealing was hanging to the nearest tree by his captors without trial.

It was with reluctance that Campbell finally consented to tell some of the early experiences of that vast cattle empire of the Old Southwest. "I reckon history will be made in those days that will never be repeated," he observed.

Large Thefts Gone "The days of stealing large herds are gone," he said. "Back 50 or more years ago as many as 100,000 head were stolen in a year. In 1877 a group of Texas ranchers formed a sort of "Secret Six," called the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association, to run the thieves out of the Southwest.

"Soon after the association was formed by Uncle Jim Loving at Graham, Tex., the 'Al Capone of cattle rustlers' was driven out of business without firing of a shot. I'll just call him 'Cap' because he later turned respectable.

"Loving hired Jim Roberts, a buffalo hunter, who had killed 12 men and had never been tried because he killed 'em right, to run Cap out of the country. Roberts and a picked band of men caught up with Cap and his thieves with their stolen herd near the border of Texas and Oklahoma, then Indian Territory.

"I'm takin' these cattle back to their owners," Roberts announced. Cap fussed and fumed, but he knew better than attempt to draw his pistol, and thus became No. 13. Those were the last cattle he stole."

Old Reliable. From Musketo, Vienna. "I'm thinking of applying for a job at the weather bureau." "What qualifications have you?" "Oh, I've got a couple of pretty reliable corns."

CAR DEALER USES BARTER

Cleveland — (UP)—William Fessenden believes something really big might come from the barter and exchange idea.

He has several cats, a couple of ducks, a police dog, an ice box, several pieces of jewelry and two raccoons to support his assertions. Behind a modest sign over his office, which proclaims, "A New Deal," Fessenden does business in used cars, or what have you.

"I'll take anything in exchange for a car but a vacant lot," Bill said. "Home sites are absolutely out."

Since he has been accepting goods as part-payment on cars, Fessenden has received such things as pianos, harps, a white owl, a monkey, rabbits, a pony, a motion picture lantern, dogs, saxophones, and an accordion.

"Once I took two pigs as a down payment on a car," he said. "Then I took them to my butcher, had him kill them and put the meat in his icebox so I could get it as I needed it."

"This is the best way I know of to sell used cars these days," he said. "It gets people who are short of cash, to buy. And once they have a car they can get out and hustle around and find work. Then they can make their payments on the car. It works fine."

"Swapping things like this puts a little personality into the business. I have a lot of fun. One day I took two cats. I got in a trade and placed them in a cage in front of the store. I tacked a sign up that said: 'Wild cats of St. Clair.' You'd be surprised at the number of people that came in and wanted to know if they really were wild cats.

"My watch dog here came in an even trade for an old touring car."

Sick Headache Doctor's Case

EYES, NOSE, SINUSES SHOULD BE EXAMINED IN SEARCH FOR CAUSE

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Sometimes sick headaches come on without any warning, but in most cases they are preceded by a feeling of depression, by an unwillingness to work, or to go about the daily affairs of life. Since there seem to be many possible causes for headaches of this type, the attack on them must be made from various points of view.

It is believed that they may on occasion be associated, as has been said, with eyestrain or disease of the sinuses. Obviously in such cases careful examination must be made by a competent specialist in diseases of the eyes to make certain that the vision is properly corrected with suitable glasses.

It should be made certain that the eyes are not abused by working under conditions of improper illumination. The nose must be examined most carefully and, if necessary X-ray pictures made of the sinuses to make certain that they do not contain polyps or infection. The physician will use the ophthalmoscope to look in the back of the eye to make certain that there is no pressure within the skull due to any disorder. Sometimes it is necessary to X-ray the skull for possible observation of an abnormality in the brain.

It is believed that migraine is associated with such disorders of hypersensitivity as hay-fever, eczema, asthma, and similar conditions. It is possible in such cases to test the reaction of the patient to various foods and proteins by skin sensitivity tests or perhaps to try elimination diets, in which food substances are eliminated from the diet when their consumption seems to be followed by an attack. Apparently not all cases are due to such sensitivity, but a considerable number may be.

In some instances the attacks seem to come on when the digestion of the person concerned is not working properly. In these instances, it is well to have a thorough study of the gastro-intestinal tract to make certain that there is neither constipation nor a residue of putrefactive matter in the bowel.

In other cases the glands of internal secretion may be involved, and it is necessary to make a thorough study of the body with a view to determining that all of the glands are neither overfunctioning or underfunctioning.

This is merely an indication of the necessity for studying every case or recurrent sick headache with all of the means known to modern medical science.

To make Children EAT

Don't force children to eat! The girl or boy who has no appetite has stasis—which means the child is sluggish. But cathartics have caused more constipation than they ever cured! The "California treatment" is best—just pure syrup of figs. Try this for a few days, then see how eagerly your youngster will eat.

Stimulate the colon and that child with a finicky appetite will devour everything set before him. Here's the simple treatment that does more for babies or older children than all the diets, fad foods, or tonics.

Nature has provided the "medicine" you'll need to stir your child's colon muscles into proper action. California syrup of figs. Pure, delicious, harmless. It acts on the lower colon—where the trouble is. It has no ill effects on the intestines.

Begin tonight, with this marvelous "California treatment." Any druggist has California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Use enough the first time to cleanse the clogged colon of every bit of poison and hard waste. Then just a little twice a week until the child's appetite, color, weight and spirits tell you the stasis is gone. WARNING! There are dealers who practice substitution. Be sure to protect your child by looking for the name CALIFORNIA on the bottle.
