Married Sunday morning, July 2nd, at the First Methodist church at Norfolk, Robert Benson and Doris Larram both of Norfolk. Robert is the son of C. L. Benson and was born and lived for several years in this community, moving to Norfolk with his parents several years ago. While his bride is not so well known here she is a bright winsome young lady. After a wedding breakfast at the C. L. Benson home the young couple left for a short honeymoon in their aeroplane, to lakes in the western part of the state. The best wishes of this community go with them for a long and happy wedded life.

Mr. and Mrs. Sol Galentine, of Norcatour, Kansas, arrived Monday for a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Mart Schelkopf and Mrs. Charles Clouse and family.

Most of the people of this community celebrated the Fourth of July in little home picnics. Some went to Red Bird.

Bible school started Wednesday at Paddock Union church. The teachers are Miss Wilma Marts and Miss Helen Cole.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES

The next State Teachers' Examinations will be held on Saturday, July 15th, at O'Neill only.

Most of the schools in the county have contracted with their teacher for the coming year. A few have not yet reported and we would appreciate hearing from these as soon as they have contracted. This would save us sending new applications out.

The contributions for the Educational Exhibit Hall are coming in nicely and plans are being made to start the erection of the building in the very near future.

POLITICS SHAPING AGAIN.

Republic-Bulletin: There can be little doubt that President Roosevelt's political honeymoon is coming to a close. The final hours of the Congress which recently adjourned, gave abundant evidence of this. On several occasions the Congress, though overwhelmingly democratic, actually got out of hand and there is little doubt that the administration leaders breathed a sigh of relief when the curtain was rung down on the special session.

Another evidence of the end of the era of good political feeling may be found in the fact that the republicans are beginning to bestir themselves and talk about the congressional campaign next year. The opposition party is watching very closely the trend of events at London. It is preparing to "jump on" any proposed agreement which would mean entangling engagements for the United States, an infringement of American sovereignty or a reduction of the tariff to a point where American industry would be still further handicapped by cheap products from abroad. Just at this time it seems likely that little will be accomplished by the conference, which might turn out to be a good thing both for the country and the political future of the democratic party.

The republicans, however, will not confine their ammunition to international issues as was evidenced by the recent statement of Representative Snell, minority leader in the house. Mr. Snell charged that the democratic promise to reduce governmental expenditures 25 per cent and balance the budget had passed "into the realm of forgotten things." He said that federal expenditures had been doubled rather than reduced and declared that congress "appropriated more money, levied more and heavier new taxes and authorized a larger bond issuance, calling for heavier annual interest charges, than any congress in the history of the United States—with the single exception of the congress in session during the World War."

Taxes have been greatly increased rather than reduced, he charged, and in addition, he added, more than eight and a half billions in new bond issues had been authorized with annual interest charges of a quarter of a billion dollars. Mr. Snell added further that instead of reducing expenditures, new activities had been added calling for new outlays of nearly four billions and he charged that the national budget is now more out of balance than at any time in the history of the country. In order to bring about an apparent balancing Mr. Snell charged that the administration is keeping two sets of books one for an "ordinary" and the other for an "extraordinary" budget. He added:

"Tricky bookkeeping, devised to conceal from the public the real financial condition of the government, may succeed in its purpose for a brief time, but it does not pay off the debts. It does not stop the strain on the public credit. It does not stop the increase in interest charges. It does not halt the upward march of federal taxes."

In conclusion Mr. Snell said: "Whether or not the measures enacted by this congress fulfill the hopes of those proposing them is a question which time alone can determine. If they prove successful their very success is the vindication of their wisdom. But if they fail, let it be said that they failed, because they were economically unsound, rather than because they were unwisely administered."

The proof of the pudding is in the eating thereof. The administration will have to stand or fall on the results of its program. The congressional campaign next year is going to be an interesting one.

UNCLE SAM'S PULLING POWER
Republic Bulletin: While European

diplomats are barking at London because the United States does not agree to submerge her national interests for European benefit, it is interesting to note that since March, because of the rise in the price of certain commodities, foreign countries have increased their purchasing power on four items alone in the sum equal to forty per cent of our total manufactured exports in the year 1932.

The American Exporter points out that the actual increase in the price of rubber alone between March 1 and June 15, plus the estimated increase in consumption indicates that the countries which grow rubber will derive from the American market an increased purchasing power in the American market of nearly fifty million dollars in the year 1932. The rubber producing countries will of course benefit through the increased world price of rubber, but it is not to be forgotten that the chief benefit they derive will come from our own country which uses 64 per cent of the rubber produced in the world.

The Exporter in estimating the advantage of China and Japan in the American market because of the increase in the price of raw silk, states that this increase in the value of silk exported to the United States will give China and Japan an additional purchasing power of over $116,000,000 in our markets. The advantage which Cuba will get because of the increased price in sugar is over $40,000,000 and of tin nearly $50,000,000.

All of which indicates that in sugar, tin, rubber and silk, four of the raw commodities which Uncle Sam imports, the producing countries will benefit in the sum of more than $256,000,000 because of the increase in the price of these commodities. Nobody doubts that the principal reason for the increase is the change of business psychology in the United States. Uncle Sam is the greatest consumer of these raw materials, and of many others. When he is prosperous he buys them in increasing quantities and the whole world feels the effect. Yet for purely selfish reasons the manufacturing countries of Europe want to pull Uncle Sam down to a lower level in order to derive a transitory benefit to themselves.

STANDING UP FOR OUR RIGHTS

Republic Bulletin: According to some newspaper comment, in the absence of the President on his sea vacation, and in the departure of Professor Moley for Great Britain the acting President was to be the well known financier, Barney Baruch. Whether this is true or not the report makes the recent public remarks of Mr. Baruch of greater interest. In a recent interview Mr. Baruch was quoted as saying he believed the President would "play a waiting game" on the war debts. He added:

"It is a well-known fact that I believe the debts should be paid. Every debt we forgive to other nations lifts a burden from their distressed business and adds it to ours, doubling our handicap."

The financier was equally positive in discussing stabilization of the dollar, remarking:

"It is time we ended this twiddle twaddle by other nations who went off the gold standard before we did and now criticize us for taking the same course. The United States gets blamed for everything. It is time we asserted our rights."

If these remarks represent the views of Mr. Brauch on international matters then Mr. Brauch can no longer, at least, be regarded as of internationalist tendencies. Not long ago he issued a statement in which he called attention to the fact that it would be a little difficult to raise the standard of living in the United States by increasing wages and shortening working hours, and at the same time lower our tariffs so that the cheap products of European nations could flood the country—products from nations which care nothing about working conditions and high standards of living.

Ever since the end of the World War, when the United States refused to be a party to the Versailles treaty, Uncle Sam has been blamed for everything wrong that has happened in the world. We can all agree with Mr. Baruch that it is about time we ended this "twiddle twaddle." The way to end it is to stand up for our own rights, refuse to be cajoled or hoodwinked into doing things for the benefit of Europe at the expense of the United States, and to develop a policy for taking care of America first. Such a policy will be good not only for ourselves but in the long run for the rest of the world, too. If the London conference does no more than scatter the fog of illusions which the internationalists in our own country have been helping to raise during the past dozen years, it will be well worth its cost.
