Kind of Beautiful

PLANNING one of these public weddings is one thing," declared A. H. Hinkler, chairman of the arrangements committee of the Bayview Charity circus, "but putting the fool thing over seems to be an entirely different proposition!"

"Surely," suggested Adolphus Weeks, "we shall find a couple somewhere who will agree to be married."

A. H. Hinkler waved his arms wildly. "Somewhere!" he shouted. "But where? Do you realize, man, that the wedding is advertised for tonight?"

"And that we've practically crawled all over that platform on our hands and knees at every performance begging — literally begging — some young couple—any young couple—to please step forward and be married so that we can give them fifty dollars in cash and other junk!" said Josephus Braun quite at the top of his lungs.

"Well," said Little Mr. Weeks, softly, placatingly, "it isn't our fault if we receive no response. We have the prizes ready. We have, as you say, pleaded. Surely—

"Surely," mocked A. H. Hinkler, "they won't expect a wedding when we've placcarded the whole city with promises that there will be one! Oh, no!"

"Well," growled Josephus Braun, "we can keep trying, I suppose."

One by one the committee had taken turns pleading, offering prizes, and beaming hopefully at the vast throng attending the circus.

Josephus Braun, chosen by the committee to make a final plea because of his deep booming voice, stood that evening and beamed. He began by enumerating the prizes. He dwelt, touchingly, on the interest all these people would take in the young people to be married here. It was just like a big, happy family, he said. Still, no response. The crowd sat like a great silent, breathing mass, waiting. Josephus Braun left the ring and consulted his brother committee men.

"Now listen, ladies and gentlemen," he beamed upon his return. "The committee will double—absolutely double the cash prize if a couple will walk up here within the next three minutes and allow themselves to be married. Just three minutes, ladies and gentlemen!" He took out his elaborate watch and marked the time.

Halfway around the auditorium a young couple rose, hesitatingly, whispering. The girl sank into her seat again, but not before Josephus had spotted her.

"Come right along!" he invited cordially, waving the watch. "Right this way! There isn't much time!"

The young man assisted the hesitant girl to her feet, and led her, trembling, to the ring. Triumphant, Josephus Braun bore his charges away. Flurry. Excitement.

Who were they? wondered the crowd. No one seemed to know. Well, it didn't really matter. They were young—and in love. Anyone could see that.

A breathless hush. The circus band began to play Lohengrin, a little blaringly. Attendants, drafted from the circus performers, and transformed by the magic of quick change appeared, taking their places with quiet dignity.

And then the bride with a great bouquet of roses, still wearing her little dark suit, but very lovely! Her cheeks were deeply pink, and she was nervous and a little afraid, but there was a soft tremulous beauty about her that the crowd sensed and approved. A little dark-eyed bride, trembling! They took her to their hearts and loved her, and smiled at her, and even wept over her, a little. It didn't matter about the groom. Just a good-looking young man, a little shabby.

The wedding went on. The gifts were presented. Josephus Braun beamed. The crowd beamed. And the little bride blushed and smiled.

The wedding was over. The crowd sighed a little regretfully, and the circus went on—while in the committee room the bridegroom bargained with the committee, taking some of the prizes and trading others for cash. At last, with their little ratttrap car packed with booty, the young couple drove away, alone, into the night.

And then a quiet roadway, ribboning into the deeper shadows of the velvety night.

"Tom," said the little bride, snuggling against his broad dark shoulder, "do you think it was all right?"

"Sure," said Tom, slipping his arm around her.

"I was awfully scared," she said, trembling a little in remembrance. "I thought maybe they'd arrest us—or something—if they knew!"

"They didn't make any rules about it," said Tom reasonably. "They just said they wanted a couple to get married!"

"It's wonderful," sighed the girl. "With all that money and all these prizes we can take baby from Aunt Mary and get us a room and live together 'till you get a job."

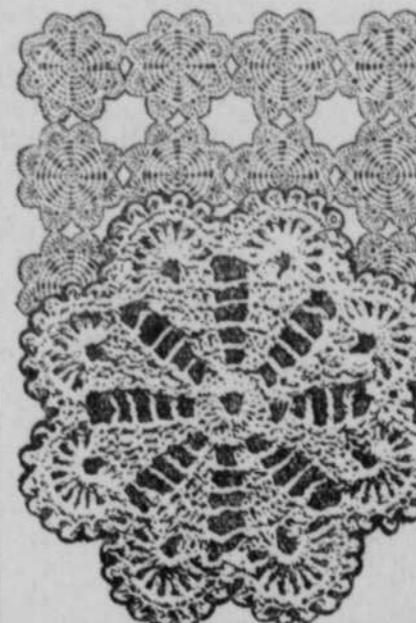

"Sure," said Tom. "The little car rattled happily on. "And Tom—"

"Yes?"

"It was kind of beautiful, wasn't it—getting married all over again after three years?"

Crochet Motif for Bedspread

By Grandmother Clark

A bedspread in crochet is a work of art, attracts attention and frequently becomes an heirloom. A spread crocheted in one piece becomes cumbersome as the work progresses. How much simpler to crochet one motif at a time and then assemble the motifs to complete spread. Watch your work grow when it can be taken along with you to social gatherings.

The above illustration represents the "Snow Flake" motif and how it shows up when put together. This motif when made of carpet warp measures six inches. Thirty-two motifs can be made from one pound of warp. This is only one of the 29 motifs shown in our book No. 27 on motif bedspreads. These motifs can also be used to make match sets for bedroom: curtains, pillows, chair-backs, scarfs, etc.

Write our crochet department enclosing 15c for this book No. 27, illustrating, with instructions, or send 25c and receive also book No. 26, with 72 edgings and insertions in crochet for all purposes.

BROWN'S VALLEY MAN NATION'S OLDEST CITIZEN

Brown's Valley Man hunted the woolly mammoth and the mastodon in the Minnesota woods equipped with spearheads of flint. That was 12,000 years ago, a little more than 10,000 years after the northern section of what is now the United States had emerged from beneath the mile-thick blanket of ice that covered it during the Glacial age. He is America's oldest known citizen.

The discovery of Brown's Valley man is the most important find to date in the study of ancient man in America. It marks a decided victory for those who think that man has been in the New World for a considerable period of time. It is a defeat for those who think that man entered the New world by way of Alaska less than 10,000 years ago.

The type of spear with which Brown's Valley Man hunted is not new to anthropologists. The spearheads of chipped flint, known as Folsom or Yuma points, from the localities in which they were first found, have long been centers of stormy battles. They have been found associated with bones of extinct mammals. But one school of American anthropology has insisted upon calling the association an accident. No human remains had ever been found in association with them.

This time, however, the shattered remnants of a human skeleton have been found in a gravel pit associated with such spearheads. These splinters of bone, found in Brown's Valley, near Fertile, Minn., have been named Brown's Valley Man.

William H. Jensen, an amateur anthropologist, first noticed the spearheads and the splinters of bone when some workmen under his direction were excavating in the gravel pit. He communicated with Dr. Albert E. Jenkins of the University of Minnesota.

Dr. Frank Leverett, authority on the Glacial age, examined the pit and pronounced it as a geological formation twelve thousand years old. — David Dietz, Scripps Howard Science Editor, in the New York World-Telegram.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a more natural movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepis brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels until nature restores them to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepis is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given to the youngest child.
