Why YOU Should Vote FOR LEGALIZED PARI-MUTUEL RACING

- 1 It will mean greater development of the livestock and horse-breeding industry—more cattle and more horses to eat the hay and grain produced by Nebraska farmers. More support for 4-H clubs.
2 Racing will be taxed by the state—an important source of revenue we do not have now.
3 Ak-Sar-Ben will share its receipts with ALL county fairs in the state.

Here is how the ballot will look—

WHAT'S DOING AT THE STATE HOUSE

By James R. Lowell

Just a few more days and Nebraska will be jogging along again in the even tenor of its way with November 6 a memory, unpleasant to some and pleasant to others. The spotlight is held by Rep. E. R. Burke, democrat, and R. C. Simmons, republican, running for the United States senate; R. L. Cochran, democrat, and Dwight Griswold, republican, running for governor; the Norris one-house legislature plan and the state's constitutional prohibition law which comes up for approval or rejection by the voters.

An outstanding feature of this election will be the absence of the party circle from the ballot for the first time since Nebraska adopted the Australian ballot. This deletion, brought about by the democratic legislature of 1933, will benefit the republicans and handicap the democrats as there are more voters of the latter political faith registered in the state than there are republicans.

The Roosevelt New Deal has entered largely into the campaign with Burke and Cochran upholding it, and Simmons and Griswold, especially the former, hurling verbal brickbats at the NRA, AAA and new deal expenditures generally.

Simmons is charging that Arthur F. Mullen, Nebraska's former democratic national committeeman, is building a political machine and is supporting Burke for this reason. Burke claims that the new deal saved the nation in time of crisis, and that Simmons is a "puppet" of S. R. McKelvie, former republican governor, bitter foe of the new

J. H. KEMP

Republican Candidate for United States Senator For Unexpired Term

J. H. KEMP He has had legislative experience, serving two terms in the Nebraska State Senate, the last term was elected president of that body.

His chief interest is in farms, farming, and stock raising, and during the past ten years has given most of his time to such interests.

In Mr. Kemp's opinion the processing tax is working a hardship on both the producer and consumer; that in the final analysis, the NRA will work to the benefit of the big industries of the east, and to the detriment of the agricultural west, permitting the massing of huge fortunes under the Code System, virtually giving the big industries a government monopoly, while those engaged in agriculture and stock raising will be operating at a loss.

deal and member of President Hoover's former farm board.

National issues mix with personality factors in congressional races for the state's five seats, all held at the present time by democrats. Edgar Howard of Columbus is the only incumbent running for reelection, however, and his republican opponent is Karl Stefan, Norfolk radio announcer.

In the First district, Henry Luckey of Lincoln, democrat, is running on a support-the-president platform, while his republican opponent, Marcus Poteet of Lincoln, is following Simmons tactics. The incumbent, Representative Morehead, decided not to enter the political arena this year.

Charles F. McLaughlin, democrat Omaha, is firmly behind the new deal in the Second district contest, while Herbert Rhodes, also of Omaha, his opponent, is admitting that there are some good qualities in the Roosevelt program. Burke, the incumbent, is running for senator.

Representative Shallenberger, incumbent in the Fourth district, was beaten in the primary election, and the contest is between C. G. Binderup of Minden, democrat leaning slightly to the left wing, and J. W. Hammond, Holdrege editor, who ranks as a more or less progressive republican.

One of the hottest contests is being staged in the Fifth district where the democratic Harry Coffee of Chadron is running on a platform 100 per cent for the president. A. N. Mathers, Gering banker, claims he would not harass the president but would "stand on his own feet." Incumbent Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff decided to run for governor instead of reelection and fell by the primary wayside.

Voters also will decide whether to adopt a constitutional amendment legalizing pari-mutuel betting at horse races, whether to elect R. C. Hunter (D), Omaha, or J. H. Kemp (R), Fullerton for the short term senatorship; keep Walter Jurgensen (D), Lincoln, as lieutenant governor, or give the job to C. W. Johnson (R), of Potter; retain Harry Swanson (D), of Omaha, as secretary of state, or put Frank Marsh (R), Norfolk on the job.

In the race for state auditor, it remains to be seen whether W. B. Price of Lincoln will keep the job, or a republican, G. W. Marsh of Lincoln, will step into the job he formerly held. Harry P. Conklin may remain as commissioner of public lands, or the place may go to Leo N. Swanson (R) of Omaha. George E. Hall is confident of staying in as treasurer, but T. W. Bass (R), Lincoln, wants his old job back.

W. H. Wright (D), Scottsbluffs, has hopes of stepping up from assistant to the attorney general, but there is a sizeable obstacle in his way in the person of R. O. Johnson (R), Lincoln. Will M. Maupin of Lincoln is carrying the democratic banner for railway commissioner with Robert J. Marsh, O'Neill, a newcomer to Nebraska politics, as his republican opponent.

L. B. Day is without opposition on the ballot for supreme court judge in the Second district; Edward E. Good, incumbent, Wahoo, and J. A. Brunt, Fairbury, will fight it out for the judgeship from the Fourth district, and Carter of Gering and Twell of Sidney are the contestants for the bench from the Sixth district. J. A. Jimerson, Auburn superintendent of schools, is making a strong fight to unseat the incumbent Charles W. Taylor of Lincoln as state superintendent of public instruction, in another non-political contest.

Senator Norris' dream that Nebraska adopt the unicameral style of legislature is commanding more attention from the voters, perhaps, than any phase of the general election campaign with the possible exception of the Burke-Simmons debates in the senatorial contest. Norris, now 73 years old, is stumpng the state with at least one speech a day for his one-house plan which he has termed his "last fight."

Norris urges the adoption of the one-house plan as a means of fixing responsibility and reducing governmental costs. A spirited opposition charges the plan would tend toward dictatorship and would reduce rural representation as the senator proposes a small chamber of 30 to 50 members to be elected by districts on a non-partisan ballot.

A poll taken by the American Legislators' association, representatives of political science, the American Bar association, American Bankers' association, American Federation of Labor, American Association of University Women, League of Women Voters, and newspaper editors, show a composite vote of all groups against the one-house plan by a 3-2 majority. The American political science association voted 6 to 1 in favor of the proposal, however.

Three states have attempted the unicameral plan and all have abandoned it. Vermont kept it for 59 years up to 1836. A number of states, including Arkansas, Arizona, Massachusetts, Oklahoma and Oregon, have considered abandonment of the bicameral plan at some time in the past 25 years, but none has done so. In several other states the legislatures or committees have rejected the one-house system.

Gist of the Capitol News.

Governor Bryan claims that by rejecting the first bids on three highway projects and re-advertising he has saved the state $110,000 this month. The state thus will have more money to spend on other road work, a large part of which will go to employ labor and pay wages, the governor asserts. The chief executive also expresses disappointment that a Tennessee firm walked off with the big construction project for 15 miles of earth removal on the Columbus power project, but says it is the Nebraska contractors' own fault for "not getting their bids down to bedrock."

Dr. P. H. Bartholomew, state director, announces that there were 464 accidental deaths in Nebraska for the first half of 1934, or about a ten per cent increase over the same period last year. Deaths from the heat, however, were less than half as many as for the preceding year despite the excessive heat this summer. There were 6,094 male and 5,875 female births during the half year, including 115 sets of twins and three sets of triplets.

thus making the going tougher for truck lines. Heretofore the service extended only to places 300 miles or less from point of shipment.

Some of the increased tax levies made by various counties this year to meet requirements of the federal emergency relief administration will be challenged in court as exceeding the legal limit, the attorney general's office has been informed. The North Western railroad will bring the suit. There are now 75 counties that have signed the federal relief agreement, which entails providing the equivalent of 1.93 mills on the 1934 assessed valuation and one-fourth of the county's gasoline tax money for relief including employment.
