

Pachyderm Sculptured in Rock by Nature

Elephant rock, so called because of its resemblance to the jungle giant, is one of the many beautiful pieces of Nature's handiwork in rock to be found along the coast of Washington.

Collision Costs Her Commander His Job

A collision between H. M. S. Renown and the Hood in British naval maneuvers off Gibraltar caused the first naval court martial in many years. As a result the commander of the Renown was stripped of his command and ordered to report to the Victory, Nelson's old ship. The repair work necessary on the Renown will prevent that vessel taking part in the jubilee review in July. The picture shows the Renown arriving at Portsmouth for repairs.

He Learns to Fly in 55 Minutes

After 55 minutes of instruction, Herbert Sargent, twenty-two, of Jersey City, made his first solo flight in a plane at the Jersey City airport and after completing the prescribed maneuvers set his plane down for a three-point landing. Eddie A. Schneider, twenty-three, Sargent's youthful instructor, holder of the junior transcontinental flying record, said he allowed Sargent to go up alone because he handled a plane perfectly. Taking the air on such short instruction is believed to have brought to Sargent a new record.

Compensation

TWENTY thousand dollars' compensation for slipping on the ice in front of my own grocery store!

"My client," Attorney Rubinsky stated, "only desires compensation for the wrong that was done to him."

Mr. Pagnetta darted a sly look at the defendant and took pleasure in Mr. Schwabacher's increasing discomfort.

Mr. Pagnetta's resentment had been accumulating ever since Mr. Schwabacher had opened a delicatessen next to his grocery store, with a window display of canned goods. When day after day he saw one or the other of his erstwhile customers come out of the store next door with an armful of bundles and a smile that reflected Mr. Schwabacher's expansive good humor, he could no longer be civil.

"You're stealing my canned goods trade. There oughta be a law—"

"Together we bring more trade into the block," the other interrupted placidly. "We both benefit."

One winter morning he stepped out to survey his icy sidewalk, and found Mr. Schwabacher from the vantage of his own already ash-strewn premises doing the same thing.

"You better the ashes lay before the customers commence," Mr. Schwabacher advised after a hearty "goot day."

"And you better mind your own business," retorted Mr. Pagnetta.

"The ice iss everybody's business," Mr. Schwabacher contended good-humoredly.

Mr. Pagnetta turned with a violence that sent his feet from under him. The result was a broken leg.

During subsequent days in the hospital his chief diversion was planning how to get the better of his rival.

"Can I collect damages," he asked the lawyer Rubinsky, "for my hospital and doctor bills, and the loss of time from business?"

Rubinsky shrugged his thin shoulders up to his large ears. "You can sue, and maybe you collect. How did it happen?"

Mr. Pagnetta described how his competitor, Mr. Schwabacher had come out of the store, picked a quarrel, and finally struck him, knocking him down and breaking his leg.

"Have you witnesses?" Rubinsky wanted to know.

"Witnesses to the blow?"

"Well—" Mr. Pagnetta thought of Bagnoni, who would witness anything for a consideration, and of Pappas, who would welcome the chance to cancel a long-standing debt. "Yes, I know of two."

Mr. O'Ryan, counsel for the defense, now wanted to know just how the blow had been delivered, exactly where it had landed.

"Just indicate it," he suggested.

"How? With his right hand—"

"Right fist!" Mr. Pagnetta corrected emphatically.

"With his right fist he delivered a blow on your left jaw behind the ear. You are sure it was his right fist?"

When the plaintiff's testimony had been fully corroborated by his two witnesses, Mr. O'Ryan faced the jurors. "Gentlemen of the jury," he said, "you have seen the blow which could have been delivered only by a good right from the shoulder—the blow for which the plaintiff asks twenty thousand dollars' compensation."

At the mention of compensation Mr. Pagnetta moistened his lips while his thoughts strayed into green pastures of anticipation. But when Mr. Schwabacher, red faced and visibly nervous, took the stand he was all attention at once.

"Gentlemen," Mr. O'Ryan addressed the jury in hushed voice. "I want to call your attention to the fact that the defendant is one of our war heroes." He reached over and touched a little cross pinned on the lapel of Mr. Schwabacher's coat. "And I am going to prove that this war hero not only would not, but could not strike a blow with his right fist. Mr. Schwabacher, will you kindly remove your coat and roll up your shirt sleeve?"

While Mr. Schwabacher struggled out of his coat, Mr. Pagnetta sat forward uneasily.

"This cross—" Mr. O'Ryan held his client's coat up and turned slowly so that all could see the small medal—"was given in compensation for a wound won in combat." Flinging out his free hand he pointed dramatically to the arm which Mr. Schwabacher had just exposed to view.

Mr. Pagnetta in company with everyone in the room, looked in his mind's eye he was seeing again those awkward movements of Mr. Schwabacher as he swept his side walk, while the voice of the counsel for the defense beat into his ears.

"Mr. Schwabacher suffered a serious wound in his upper right arm. So serious that the bone between the elbow and shoulder had to be removed. As you can see, the arm is practically useless. . . . Your honor, I demand the arrest of the plaintiff and his witnesses on charges of perjury."

CONVINCING ARGUMENT

Horses, buggies and wagons were drawn into service in reaching a church celebration at Holt, Mo., because the country roads were so muddy motor cars could not travel them. Here is powerful vindication of the horse—also a compelling argument of the community for all-weather roads.—Kansas City Star.
