Employment of rural unemployed on farm-to-market roads involves no relocation of families, separation of wage earners and their families or any change in established home living conditions.

Workers on farm to market roads will be under the direction of local officials who have personal knowledge of their conditions. Pride in home and local communities will tend to raise the morale of workers and increase their efficiency above the usual standard of relief labor.

Needy farmers could be given work on farm-to-market roads, thus making it possible for them stock feed instead of borrowing from the government.

Experience has remonstrated that road construction is the best means of overcoming unemployment. Men can be put to work without delay. Projects can be distributed widely thruout the country. This is particularly true of farm to market road improvement projects. From 85 per cent to 90 per cent of the dollar spent on highways goes to the workers. The percentage should be even higher under the plan herein suggested.
