Large Tourist Increase Offers Opportunity For Wide Awake Merchants

"O'Neill merchants who are 'on their toes' and looking for their share of this summer's tourist dollar should reap a rich harvest. Reason: There will be twice as many tourists on the road as there were last summer."

Such is the surprising prediction just released by the Conoco Travel Bureau, America's largest free travel service, maintained by the Continental Oil company, Denver, Colo.

In a bulletin addressed to the merchants of "Main Street" in all parts of the United States, the Bureau advises them to prepare for the greatest tourist trade in years.

"Dust storms have spent their fury, leaving a new top soil, and flood waters have receded," says Joe H. Thompson, director of the Bureau. "As a result of heavy rainfall, America's highways, and particularly the mountain areas, are green in vegetation, and wild flowers and more beautiful than ever."

"During the first five and a half months of this year the Conoco Travel Bureau received 115 per cent more trip service applications than during the same period in 1934.

"At present, more than 250 carefully trained employees are working day and night shifts in the bureau's Denver offices. During the early part of June last year the Denver personnel number only 126.

"The Conoco Travel Bureau was founded five and one-half years ago in response to the demands of motor vacationists and everyday travelers anxious to secure accurate, up-to-the-minute information regarding North American highways, scenic regions and travel costs. Each motorist applying for Travel Bureau assistance receives a generous assortment of maps, booklets, cottage camp and hotel guides, and special instructions covering every phase of his journey. Even temporary highway detours and choice fishing and hunting areas are indicated. More than 22,000 Conoco dealer stations in 42 states act as branches of the Bureau and are equipped to render additional tourist assistance of a more localized nature."

Readers of this newspaper may secure individualized trip services without spending a cent—even for postage—merely by writing the Conoco Travel Bureau, Continental Oil Building, Denver, Colo., stating where and when they wish to go.

Rates for commercial lighting are now being reduced, along with some other rate reductions.

With these new lower rates, consumers will be able to use better and more lighting in stores and shops.
