SOUTHWEST BREEZES

A bunch of yearlings from the James ranch were sent to the Atkinson sale ring last week.

Darold Carpenter has been operating his tractor in the hay fields at the Berry ranch for some days past.

H. L. James and R. Saunders went to Atkinson Tuesday of last week to attend the sale at the pavilion.

The following have each lost a horse the past summer, various causes from old age to extreme heat: E. E. Young, Tom Baker, H. L. James and the writer.

Lloyd James bought a medium heavy mare at the sale pavilion last Tuesday. He says his intentions are to buy 25 head for the purpose of raising colts.

Wayne Baker, employed on a ranch near Alliance, spent last week at the home of his father, John Baker, in Swan precinct, returning to Alliance Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Young spent the past week at their former home in Kansas, leaving the ranch here in charge of their nephew, Claude Andrews, who has been employed here for the past month, coming from Kansas.

Ed Welton, one of the old timers down in Josie, abandoned things at the ranch long enough last week to take in the sale Tuesday at Atkinson, when about a thousand cattle were put thru the ring and some fifty head of horses.

Things in The Frontier composing room went a little haywire last week with respect to the Breezes. A clipping from an Omaha paper got into this column as original matter. Mr. Hearst's paper quoted a bit from the president's recent speech about rewiring the white house, suggesting that the nation was also being haywired. Cr. to whom Cr. belongs.

It is reliably stated that the venom of the black widow is 100 times more deadly than that of the universally feared rattle reptile. Just the same, any number of the black widow spiders would be taken on in preference to going up against a 5-foot rattler, by this unventuresome scribe.

Southwestern Holt claims no aspirations to have any of its mothers or daughters appear in the big papers with grinning physiognomy and gnashing teeth, poised with golf club, but it could furnish a list of those who are doing the worth while things, making homes, guiding the young, spreading tables with bounties for their men folks as they come in ravenous from the hay meadows.

A Pennsylvania financier declares the time has come that American financial interests can no longer maintain a submissive silence on economic questions. He advocates "immediate, comprehensive permanent and nation-wide procedure in defence of the immutable laws of economics to which America must cling or perish." Finance is beginning to speak its mind respecting the great federal economic jag.

Mrs. Jay Roblyer, former resident of Swan, experienced the thrill of having her name announced recently as the winner of one of the five dollar cash prizes given out each week at Atkinson. In one year Atkinson merchants give to people of the community a total of $1,560 in cash prizes, on a basis of $30 per week.

The night life in some country towns disclose three or four girl simptoms in the "beer-parlors" sipping the amber fluid and puffing the white pits of nicotine, but there are three or four hundred fine young women out under the star sprinkled heavens on the open streets who are getting their pleasure in a sane and wholesome way.

Tom Salem, Amelia's popular merchants prince, has added to his already nearly complete facilities for taking care of a large trade one of the up-to-the minute refrigerating systems which manufactures ice air as wanted. Refrigeration around Amelia is mostly effected by flowing wells, which is of no expense and quite satisfactory for many kitchen supplies. The installation of the refrigerator enables Tom to stock some items of food not heretofore carried.

Alvin Baker was thrown from a rake Wednesday of last week in the hay field at the Inez Valley ranch and was severely shaken up, his right hip being dislocated and a kidney jarred out of place. A broken strap let the rake tongue fall, frightening one of the horses, a colt, into a frenzy. Vicious kicking and a runaway resulted. To avoid the hind heels of the kicker, Alvin leaned far over on his precarious perch and when the tongue dropped he was thrown to the ground. At this writing he is taking things easy at home and thinks he will soon be OK again.

One of numerous publications of a great church is responsible for the story that among the passengers on board a ship was a man who stuttered. One day he hurried to the captain. "S-s-s-s-s," he stuttered. "Oh, I can't be bothered!" said the captain angrily. "Go to somebody else." The man tried to speak to everyone on board, but not one would wait to hear what he had to say. At last he came to the captain again. "Look here," said the captain, "I can tell you what to do when you want to say anything, sing it." Suddenly, in a tragic voice, the man began to sing: "Should old acquaintance be forgot and never brought to mind? The bloom' cook's fell overboard and is twenty miles behind." R. S.
