SOUTHWEST BREEZES

By Romaine Saunders

Lloyd James is back to the ranch for the haying season.

Rhody Adams was scouting around Inman last Saturday.

Elliott Carpenter is helping in haying at the Jack Higgins place.

Mr. and Mrs. Roblyer of Atkinson visited at the Riley home on Saturday.

Roy Warden went to Chambers Monday for equipment and repairs to enable him to launch a haying crew.

John Baker has been visiting at the home of his sister Mrs. Hazel-baker, expecting to go to Ord Wednesday.

Cream took a four cent jump Saturday, Capitol Hill may in due time announce its responsibility for the milk maid's increased income.

Checks in payment of the bond election have come from the court house at O'Neill. The primary is yet unpaid, but it was hardly worth the price.

Work was begun last week on the two and a half miles of highway from Amelia to No. 11. The contract specifies that it be completed by September 30.

Haying has got into full swing in the southwest and something near an average crop is being run into stacks as fast as the blistering heat will permit men and horses to percolate.

With numerous dances, carnival shows and the pictures to distract dwellers where these things abound they know nothing of the peace of the simple life as experienced out this way.

After a hard day of sweat and dirt and heat and wind and work go out and stretch on the grass and look the great universe of God spread overhead full in the face and see if you may discover what it is all about.

With an overwhelming and influential press, the business interests of the country and former great party leaders of his party against him and the miners' union for him, the president's chances for re-election are not so good.

The former bulwark of democracy in Nebraska, the Omaha World-Herald, is becoming a little more opposed to the new deal each day. For long the opponents of the White House program layed it mostly to Sec. Wallace but gradually responsibility is being placed at the proper source.

Every week brings visitors to this section from less favored regions looking for range for cattle. Already large herds have been brought in and the demand for room seems to increase. Pastures continue green but cannot hold out forever against a burning sun. Cool with a rain most of Thursday afternoon of last week was a great help. Between one-half and one inch of moisture fell.

Some progress is being made.

A group of ladies at a popular bathing resort have placed a ban on men with hair-grown bosoms appearing in the up-to-date swimming togs, demanding that they come in full dress or shave their breasts. A counter attack seems to be in prospect with the demand from the male bathers that the ladies have the furry growth from under their arms removed.

Northern Holt had its Doc Middleton, its Kid Wade and some lesser lights of what would be now termed gangland, and the southwest had its romantic figure in the person of a ja—perhaps we had better say female—desperado. Stories are current yet of the operations of the Shields, the dominant figure of which band of horse raiders was a buxom daughter of the family of outlaws. Having a horse shot from under her, stripping the saddle and bridle from the fallen mount and transferring to a stolen horse and making her get away was all in the work of a day—or rather night. Desperate and no mistake, but even she would have scorned to be classed with the present day female "bar fly" that hangs about the beer dispensaries lapping up all they can get handed out to them.

Mr. Coventry lost the purse when he was working in one of the large hay barns here and did not discover his loss until it was buried beneath several feet of loose hay. Rags was brought on the scene, given a scent of paper money and told to "go get it" which he promptly did. This is the third pocket book he has found.
