 A lady from this vicinity who visited relatives near Platte, S. D., last week gave a vivid description of the grasshoppers and drouth conditions in that territory. While visiting at her brother's home one evening she admired a beautiful Chinese elm which grew in front of the house, but when the household awoke the next morning they found the elm stripped of its leaves and bark. The people don't even hang their washings out because the grasshoppers would eat it. All clothes are dried indoors. The lady said to look about one was like looking into a kettle of lively popping corn. The people in that community were optimistic, however. They received money from the relief organization and believed in spending it. This was evident at an Old Settlers picnic where people were well dressed and gay.

 Mr. and Mrs. John Shald and family, of Stuart, called on the Joe Winkler family Sunday afternoon, Mary Ann returning home with them.

I Crossed the Continent on a Cupful o' RED CROWN!
 ...boasts Kermit Lidder

IT'S something of a hobby with me—crossing the continent is. But, old experienced continent-crosser that I am, do I have my eyes opened this Spring? I do!

"Always before, I make the trip by foot, figuring I'm money ahead if other folks buy the gasoline. This time, though, I get reckless. I decide to forget expense and go in my own car. 'But, Kermit,' I say to myself, 'don't go completely nuts all at once. Take it easy and gradual,' I say.

"That's sensible, so I start it off with just one tea-cupful of gasoline in the tank. And right there is where I get my eye-opener: It happens to be Red Crown gasoline that I buy. And do I have to make another single stop for gas the whole way across? I do not! That one cupful takes me coast to coast, and I even have trouble stopping the car when I get to the Golden Gate!"

We don't believe Kermit could really have been serious about this matter. In fact, we don't believe there is any such person.

It is a fact, though, that many motorists do have false or exaggerated ideas about gasoline mileage. That's why Standard Oil is conducting a great public road test this summer, in which thousands of motorists are taking part.

Reports already indicate that many are learning valuable new facts about the economical operation of their cars—discovering how to use gasoline more efficiently—finding out which brand of motor fuel does the best and cheapest job for them. Even if you aren't entered in the World's Greatest Road Test, it will pay you to
