Wallace Bares New Deal Plans

Complete Co-operatives Seen as Death Blow to American Ideal.

By WILLIAM J. LEE

CHICAGO, ILL.—Establishment of cooperatives for producers and consumers, wiping out the American system of free competition and business on a profit basis and threatening the ruin of independent farmers and tradesmen and retail storekeepers, is now seen as one of the next objectives of the New Deal.

Study Co-operatives in Europe. In his book Mr. Wallace declares that "it is inevitable that more and more emphasis is going to be laid on the idea of co-operation as distinguished from free competition" and sets forth that the only way a democracy can survive "is to develop the genuine co-operative ideal to the limit."

"Producers' co-operatives are not enough," he asserts. "The co-operative way of life must pervade the community, and this means there must be consumers' co-operatives as well as producers' co-operatives."

The day after the Wallace book appeared, President Roosevelt announced he had sent a New Deal commission to Europe to study the operation of co-operatives.

Commenting upon the Democratic co-operative plank, the Wallace book and the President's co-operative commission, and the fact that there are marked similarities between Mr. Roosevelt's acceptance speech and the Wallace volume, the Kansas Times states:

"The co-operative commonwealth idea... has recalled the declaration of Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell some time back that, under the new order he envisaged for America, business as it now is known logically would tend to disappear."

Platform Reticence Explained. How the Wallace idea of co-operation is viewed in Democratic circles may be seen in the following statements by Frank R. Kent, Democrat, in one of his recent columns: "Apparently he (Mr. Wallace) believes that under the general-welfare clause a liberal-minded Supreme court could permit transformation of the country into a gigantic co-operative commonwealth, under which the objectives of the NRA, AAA and other invalidated New Deal measures could constitutionally be achieved. There seems no other way to interpret his language."

"It is quite the most far-reaching idea yet advanced and it is easy to understand why the New Deal politicians did not want it injected into the campaign."

From this it seems clear the New Deal now proposes to set up a system of regimentation that would ruin every independent farmer and every independent retail merchant. There are millions of independent farmers and more than 475,000 retailers in the United States.

Such a regimentation might deny a farmer's son an opportunity to earn a living for himself on his own farm and prevent a man establishing himself in a business of his own making. All might become cogs in a huge federal machine.
