THE PAY-ROLL TAX AND OLD AGE INSURANCE

briefly, the social security act, as now in effect, works as follows: During the present year, every employer in the land employing eight or more people has been subject to a tax equal to one per cent of his total payroll. This tax will be due and payable on Jan. 1, 1937. Purpose of the tax is to provide money for state unemployment insurance funds. If they lack such funds, the Federal government will keep the money and administer the job itself.

This tax will be increased by one per cent next year, and another one per cent in 1938, reaching a maximum of 3 per cent of all payrolls, to be paid entirely by employers.

That is one phase of the social security act—the employment phase. The other phases have to do with old age insurance. The tax for this starts on Jan. 1, and will amount to 2 per cent of all payrolls. Half of this will be paid by employers, and the other half by employees. (Maximum taxable income of an individual is $50 per week.) This tax will rise slowly, and reach a top of 6 per cent in 1949, 3 per cent of which will be paid by employers and 3 per cent by workers. All of this money will be retained by the Federal government, and will be used to retire workers at the age of 65.

Thus, when the maximum is reached, the social security tax will total 9 per cent on all payrolls, with certain exceptions such as agricultural and domestic labor. It is obvious that the tax will bring in vast sums of money. Estimates say that in 1937—when the total tax will be 4 per cent of payrolls—revenues will exceed $1,000,000,000. Yield for the following year will be close to $1,400,000,000. And when the top figure is reached, it is anticipated that $3,000,000,000 a year will flow in.

And here is where one of the jokers appears. Estimates say that old age insurance reserves—which must, under the law, be retained by the Federal government and invested in Government bonds—will reach $47,000,000,000 by 1980. Today our Federal debt is at an all time high of $34,000,000,000. This debt, as the U. S. News has pointed out, must be inflated by another $13,000,000,000 by 1980 just to provide enough bonds for the investment of old age security money, entirely dismissing other holdings of government bonds.

Worst joker of all, according to some commentators, is that under the law, Congress could legally appropriate this old age security money for other purposes. In other words, it is morally but not legally bound to use the funds for the pensioning of the elderly. An irresponsible Congress, convening, say, in 1960, could spend the savings piled up and the worker who had been contributing, in company with his employer, part of his earnings for a generation to assure a financially independent old age, would be out of luck.

Still another joker, some say, is that if the sums involved were put into policies providing pensions on the same scale as those provided by annuities sold by private insurance companies, the individual would get much more when he reached 65. This has been disputed by others, and the whole matter has been so befogged by argument and contradictory statistics that no one really knows what the exact truth is. The discussion of the social security law could be continued for pages, but it is not intended to be exhaustive—a book would be necessary if that were the aim. It seems certain that you will hear much debate concerning it in the next Congress, and there is a good chance that the law will be amended in a number of particulars.
