The farm group is organizing. It appears here that most members do not realize that there was a crop failure in Nebraska. The Washington papers are full of stories commending the administration for cutting down on the relief expenditures, and the farm group is doing everything possible to bring to the attention of Congress that the drouth stricken districts, such as the third district have not recovered from the depression such as industrial districts and where a crop was really raised. Attention is also being called to the fact that something must be done about placing an excise tax on babassu oil, which is coming to this country from Brazil, free of duty. With an excise tax of 3c on cocoanut oil from the Philippines, about $3,000,000 has been saved the American producer of fats and oils, but this market will be wiped out unless an excise tax is placed on Brazilian oil. This is one of the problems facing the farm group.

Washington society is talking about Mrs. McClean's party, which she gave the other night. It cost her about $50,000 to give that party and she had about 300 people for dinner. One year ago it was stated that Mrs. McClean was broke, but she still has two houses in town, one called "The Mansion." She rented these two houses, including "The Mansion," to the government and some of those who seem to know what the government is paying for rent, figure this one little dinner and party cost her about what the taxpayers pay her for one year's rent. Mrs. McClain, according to the papers here, wore the Hope diamond, but some of the society writers here indicate it was a replica of the Hope diamond and not the real diamond.

The third congressional office has introduced three of its major bills. These included the Cereal Grain Bill, which is being fought by the molasses and sugar trusts; the bill to appoint a commission to study the farm dollar and the bill to pay feed and seed loans—bushel for bushel in kind. The bill to erect a memorial to the memory of Frank and Lute North of Columbus was also reintroduced by the third congressional office.

When the President came to the House chamber to deliver his message on the "state of the union," every precaution was taken to protect him. Hours before his arrival on Capitol Hill, many police and secret service men were on duty and the miles of subways were guarded. Trusted employees, secret service men and police who have been employed here for years were pressed into service and no one was supposed to pass except those who were identified.

Admission to the gallery was by ticket only, but that did not prevent people getting through the lines by subterfuge or "pull." It was noted by those who were close to the President that he was in excellent health. His double chin as conspicuous and his smile magnetic as ever. Few people know that the President has no use of his legs from the hips down. It was noticed that his "walk" was somewhat more difficult than usual. His apparent "walking" is done by a movement of shoulders and body which really gives him the opportunity to "walk" on stilts. These stilts are connected with a metal belt or basket that goes around his belt or his hips, connected with steel on both sides of his legs which are clamped together at his knees and clamped together on the soles of each shoe. With a cane in each hand and leaning on the arm of his bodyguard on the other he is able to give an unusually fine appearance of "walking" and he does a fine job of it. His smile in the house was captivating and he was cheered to the roof by both sides of the aisle.

Mrs. Roosevelt sat in the President's gallery in the front row. She didn't look very well, apparently tired, as she had just returned from delivering a speech and from the bedside of her son who was very sick.

In the back row, almost in the rear, was Mrs. Wilson, wife of the President, and at times when reference was made to the war today, she placed her black glove over her eyes. Very few people paid any attention to her.

As the President referred to the Constitution and hinted at the decisions of the Supreme Court, many members of the majority looked over at the minority side and smiled.

Long before the President arrived to deliver his speech to Congress, senators and congressmen who assembled together listened closely to the result of the last election that gave 523 electoral votes to Roosevelt and 8 to Landon. As Senator Austin of Maine announced that Landon-Knox had received Maine's electoral vote the majority side gave the minority side a "Bronx" cheer. When the results were read, the news that people had on election day selected Roosevelt and Garner for president and vice president the result was declared official by members of congress and certificates of election were signed and made ready for the President. That was the first delivery to the President and Vice-President. That was the first official congressional news that Roosevelt had been elected President of the United States for the next four years.

More than 100 hundred photographers, battery motion picture machines were in the house long before and after the President's appearance and—believe it or not, a lot of members of congress who wanted their pictures in the paper were busily talking to newspaper men or photographers. Many of them who knew how pictures were made, made an effort to be down in the "well," so they could be photographed. Among those were Sol Bloom who got out the voluminous George Washington centennial program. Members who have been here a long time say he is always in front of the camera.

Howard Christman of Genoa, Nebraska, came to the congressional office with his brother who lives at Allentown, Penn. They had not seen each other for thirteen years and for the next two or three days will visit places of historic interest in and around Washington. Howard tells the people in the congressional office that he is surprised to learn that the people in the east don't understand the language of the people of Nebraska.

Nebraska women coming to Washington to keep house for their husbands are starting to realize what high prices are. Fresh eggs are 55c a dozen here.

After the President's departure, congress lost no time in getting down to business and the first matter of business was neutrality, but the senate beat us by passing without a dissenting vote, the resolution prohibiting arms shipments to Spain and the need for further arms embargo legislation. The house would have passed the resolution about the same time it was passed in the senate, but for the objection of a new member from Minnesota. This delayed the house somewhat, but the resolution was eventually passed by only one dissenting vote.

Many newspaper men—and there are thousands of them here, mourned the passing of Norris A. Huse, of the Associated Press. Word came of his death during the night and the third district office was besieged with calls and messages of condolence. Norris Huse got his start as a newspaperman in Norfolk and he made a great name for himself among most of the newspaper men in this and other countries. Many newspaper men recalled the early days of wire photographs and gave the late Nebraska newspaper man credit for the full development and international use of that wonderful service.

Crawford Kennedy, of Albion, Nebraska, was an early visitor to the congressional office. Mr. Kennedy used to be on "republican patronage" but lost out last year. He caught a bad cold at the Cleveland convention and is not in the best of health. He shows a letter from his old friend John Morehead of Nebraska with whom he agrees that "this country showed it was for Roosevelt in the last election and the republicans might as well admit it." He admits he is one of the most "vicious standpat republicans in Washington."

Protests have been coming in from Newman Grove regarding the prospective consolidation of the rural routes there. These protests have been taken up with the Second Assistant Postmaster General who has been asked to check very carefully the situation before an order for consolidation is issued.

It is reported that 3,000 Japanese have started for Spain to join General Franco. It is beginning to look like a 1937 Olympics over at Madrid.

Can You Get A Billiard Ball In Your Mouth?

Down at Royal they do have the devil's own time now and then when a citizen tries something new. Some times the new stunt works and then it fails. Several weeks ago a pool hall operator there made a wager that he could insert a pool ball in his mouth. There are tricks in all trades and he at once removed his false teeth and easily enough squeezed in the sphere of ivory. Then came the task of removing the ball. Fifteen minutes of problematical effort, gasping, hoping and probing resulted in victory.

Newspapers ate up the story and from back east came a gift to the small town contortionist in form of a device intended for removal of fruit jar caps in which that company seals a well known brand of coffee. Now there is another worry on our part. Who knows what may happen to the jar lid remover? It was sent him for use in extracting pool balls from his mouth.

County Judge C. J. Malone is confined to his home this week with an attack of the flu.

The M. E. Ladies Aid met at the home of Mrs. Ted McElhaney last Thursday. There was a good attendance in spite of the severely cold weather.

State Superintendent Taylor last Tuesday distributed $231,078 to the various counties of the state. The allotment for Holt county is $5,322.00. The number of children entitled to share in the apportionment is 398,069 and the amount per child is a little over thirty-one cents.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Meyer were called to Steinauer, Nebr., the latter part of last week by the death of Mrs. Meyer's mother. The returned to O'Neill Sunday.

William Flannery, 42, who was convicted on a charge of manslaughter in Pierce county Feb. 8, 1933, for the shooting of D. Paul Lowery, Holt county school teacher was granted a commutation last Friday and released from the state penitentiary. He will be on parole nine months.

Supervisors Matousek, Reimers and Smith went down to Lincoln last Tuesday to take up with the state engineer the completion of a road in the southern part of the county, that was designated over a year ago. The members of the board are expected to return the latter part of the week and they will be in regular session next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Norris Coats, of Stuart, were in the city Tuesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Coats returned the first of the week from a visit to New York City and while there Norris had the misfortune to contract the flu and he spent three days in a hospital, which detracted some from his enjoyment of the trip. One thing that impressed Norris more than anything else on his eastern trip, according to his story, was his inability to get a good beef steak in the giant city of the east and he says that he will try and make up for that deficiency during the next few weeks at home.

Here's a fair proposition:

A few weeks ago we made a pretty daring claim for the gasoline that is being sold this winter from Standard Red Crown pumps throughout Nebraska. We said it would start any car in good condition in one-second at zero temperatures.

We knew we were promising a great deal when we said that. One second is fast—just about no time at all! But we knew that in this winter's Standard Red Crown we had a gasoline which would back up that promise to the limit.

It has done that. Thousands of Nebraska motorists have been using this fast-starting Standard Red Crown right through the coldest weather. Many have gone out of their way to tell us that it has given them the best winter-driving performance they've ever experienced. Not one has claimed it let them down. Now—we know there are some who still have not tried Standard Red Crown gasoline this winter. If you are one of these, we'd like to make you a proposition:

Ask five of your friends who drive cars whether they are using Standard Red Crown gasoline this winter. (Chances are that three out of the five are.) Ask them what kind of starting they're getting with it. That will give you something more than our promise to go on. But will it work in your car? That's the real test.

Well—you're going to need gasoline before long. So, when your tank gets low, drive in where you see a Standard Red Crown pump and get a "fill" of this special winter gasoline. Then the next morning, after your engine has had time to cool off (assuming the battery is charged and winter-grade motor oil is in the crankcase), turn the key, step on the starter, and when your engine turns over... TIME IT!
