and democratic parties certain law offices frame the platforms to be adopted in the post-primary party conventions. While the voters seldom know what these platforms contain and the conventions are held after the candidates are selected at the primaries, the bunk in the platforms become ballyhoo for the legislative session.

The party managers, failing to install the old convention setup during the last session, will make another try in 1939.

The general defensive tactics of the unicameralists will be based on higher salaries for the legislators, an iron-clad anti-lobby law, and a general defense of the non-partisan feature.

The personal records of the legislators will be compiled and the members given ratings based on 100 per cent. These ratings will be discussed openly in the campaign, should a number of the present members seek office.

Inside gossip in unicameral ranks indicates that only 8 or 9 of the members of the present session have any chance of reelection. Legislator Norton claims fourteen progressives who ought to be returned. All the setups discard the present members from Lancaster and Douglas counties.

Governor Cochran has given out mild criticisms of the unicameral. There are indications that he may seek a third term. Terry Carpenter is already in the field. There is sentiment for John N. Norton as a democratic candidate, and a growing demand for Senator Charles A. Defoe. Attorneys of the state, however, are talking of judicial honors for Dafoe. Dr. A. P. Fitzsimmons of Tecumseh is being discussed as a possible candidate for the governorship, and also as a likely candidate for congress, if Congressman Luckey should not staunchly support the President.

The republican gubernatorial situation is not attracting the attention it deserves. Speaker Warner a logical candidate for the nomination, got entangled in the committee of the whole scrap. In this mixup he alienated the support of the progressives. William Madgett of Hastings, probably will not take any part in the 1938 scrap. The attitude of O. S. Spillman of Norfolk is not known. Amos Thomas of Omaha, president of the legislative council, is a possibility in Warner's place.

Kenneth Wherry of Pawnee City, is really the man who is gaining strength as the possible republican nominee. He recently assailed Secretary Banning of the department of agriculture on the matter of gasoline tax collections. Wherry insisted on no shrinkage in the cash collections. He came out of the fray with Banning's scalp. Wherry is backed by Sam Klaver of Omaha, one of the shrewdest political organizers in the state. Should Wherry be a candidate, nothing can defeat him in Douglas county. He carried the county in 1932. During the last two years his position in the metropolis has been strengthened.

Bids on about $1,100,000 worth of highway construction and maintenance are being tabulated by the state highway department. A bridge in Keith county is included, three hard surfaced projects, and about 128 miles of grading in various parts of the state.

taxes thereon. Smith and the others operate a fleet of gasoline transports. The state received a judgment for $1,064.34.

The daily press on Wednesday morning carried a story that Paul C. Burke, 27, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Burke of Coleridge, Nebr., was stranded somewhere in France after changing his mind about joining the Spanish loyalist forces. According to the story Burke signed up as a bricklayer at Minneapolis, Minn., but after arriving in Spain, found out they were going to make him a soldier, instead of laying brick, he quit and fled to France. Mr. and Mrs. Burke were former residents of this county, Mrs. Burke being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shoemaker, and she has several relatives in this city and county.
