

ONE INDIAN FOUND TO BE DEAD WHEN FOUR STOP HERE

Companions of Dead Man Can Throw No Light On Death. Had Tho't Him Asleep.

Four Indians from the Rosebud reservation arrived in the city from Omaha about 7 o'clock this morning on their way home and stopped here for breakfast. After stopping here they discovered that they had a dead man in the party. The dead man was Arthur David, 29 years of age who had been in Omaha with Quickbear and Blackhorse as witnesses before the federal grand jury.

County officials were notified of the death, the body remaining in the car until the officials had been notified. The rest of the party were questioned about the death but all insisted they knew nothing of it until they reached the city. The Superintendent at Rosebud was notified and he wired that he was on his way here to investigate the case and that he would send a truck for the body.

The other three Indians in the car with the deceased were Phillip Quickbear, assistant to the federal special officer at Rosebud, and James Blackhorse, night policeman at Rosebud. The other Indian in the party was Collins Jordan, a student, who was a passenger with the other three riding to Rosebud. Jordan and David were in the back seat, the other two being in front.

Jordan said that David got sick on the way here and threw up a couple of times, but they thought nothing of it and he went to sleep. He thought David was asleep and was astounded when they discovered upon their arrival here that he was dead.

Physicians who examined the dead man here said that he had been dead about 4 hours. Whether an autopsy will be held to determine the cause of death will not be decided until the arrival of the superintendent sometime this afternoon.

STUNTED SUDAN GRASS MAY PROVE DANGEROUS FEED

Drouth Hit Sudan and Sorghums May Produce Prussic Acid Poisoning In Stock.

At this time of year farmers are urged to use caution in turning livestock on fields of Sudan grass and sorghums for pasture. The past few years have shown that stunted Sudan may be dangerous. Losses seem to occur after extended periods of drouth. In most cases of Sudan grass poisoning it is thought it is caused by inferior seed having some cane seed mixed in but this cannot be proved.

Dr. L. Van Es, chairman of the animal pathology department at the Nebraska college of agriculture, suggests that before chances are taken with a greater number of valuable animals that safety of the field be tested by turning into it one or more animals of inferior quality.

South African investigators present evidence indicating sulphur is apparently a preventative against prussic acid poisoning. There, farmers are advised to combat the poisoning by mixing sulphur with salt licks, adding from 5 to 5.7 per cent of the sulphur. Full grown cattle may be dosed with two table-spoonsful of sulphur daily over unlimited periods. However, they should not be dosed continuously for more than a month when they already have access to sulphur-salt licks.

First Material And Child Health Meeting Is Held

The first meeting of the Material and Child Health refresher courses was held in this city last Tuesday afternoon and was addressed by Dr. Frank P. Murphy. There were about forty at the meeting, which was held in the auditorium of the court house Tuesday afternoon. Among those in attendance was Mrs. Hines of Spencer, chairman of the Boyd county association, and also two health nurses from that city and the three physicians of this city.

Following is a synopsis of the talk by Dr. Murphy:

"It should be the right of every expectant mother to be able to have her baby safely and with a minimum of discomfort. Unfortunately experience has taught us that such an outcome is not to be expected in every case. Due to racial mixtures, unhygienic living, constitutional diseases and the scars of previous ill-health, some women are bound to invalidism, loss of their babies or even death.

"Every year in the United States some 15,000 women die from causes connected with pregnancy or childbirth. Seventy-five per cent of these deaths are now preventable in the light of our present medical knowledge.

"The whole country is shocked now and then by an airplane accident with an occasional total loss of all on board; or recoils with horror when it reads about the bus that ran into a canal in Florida with the loss of thirteen lives. Again, if some catastrophe should wipe out a whole city the size of this one, the whole world would read about it. The whole world is reading about the loss of life in the flood region along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers and sympathizing with the unfortunate people of those areas. Yet the loss of life under any of these circumstances is but a small fraction of the preventable maternal deaths in our country, year in and year out.

"Nothing need be said of the unknown number of women, who become invalids every year as a result of childbearing, nor of the enormous sacrifice of infants every year, or even of the economic loss thereby to the nation.

"We need to face hard facts, such as these.

"I certainly do not want to make it appear that such women are taking undue risks in having babies. There is a certain risk connected with every act of our daily lives, even inside our homes. Among other things, the bathtub is positively an instrument for maiming or crippling its users, or even a death-trap, if an electric fixture is within easy reach. If we go out in a car on a main-traveled road on Sundays or holidays, we definitely take our lives in our hands. Yet, we think little of such risks as these.

"To go back to our subject, what are we going to do about the 12,000 unnecessary and preventable deaths among our prospective mothers? Nebraska's contribution amounts to about 125 of that number. There is only one answer. We must get the prospective mother to her physician during early pregnancy. She must be educated as to what the medical profession can and will do for her, if she asks for it. But it is definitely up to her to see that she gets what she needs. The physician cannot force the patient to come to his office. She must go of her own accord and go early during pregnancy. She must learn what can be done for her and take more than a casual interest in what may well prove disastrous for her or her baby, or both."

Gustav Voigt of Stuart, A Bachelor, Takes His Own Life With A Pistol

Gustav Voigt, 52 years of age, bachelor, shot and killed himself last Wednesday morning at Stuart, while riding in a truck with Wilford Seger, an employee of William Krotter. Voigt shot himself in the right temple, the bullet passing thru and slightly injuring the driver of the truck.

Voigt lived three miles east and one mile south of Stuart, with his mother, 87, and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Kaiser, Mrs. Kaiser being a niece of Voigt's. He was well fixed financially but brooded over the loss of money in the Stuart bank a few years ago.

Sheriff Duffy went to Stuart early Wednesday morning to investigate the case. From his investigation we find that Voigt had a spell about 4 o'clock that morning and announced his intention of killing himself and his mother. Mr. Kaiser talked him out of it and tried to get the gun, but Voigt refused to give it up. He had sold a load of corn to William Krotter and the latter truck went out to the farm after the corn and Voigt rode into town with them. When they were on the edge of Stuart, he drew his revolver and killed himself.

Mr. Norman was thrown from the car onto the track and his neck was broken. He was on his way to this city when the accident occurred.
