Tuesday was devoted to observation of bindweed infestation and methods of eradication, with a stop at the university experimental farm near York. On Wednesday the Saline county cooperative corn test near Wilber was visited, also the Kuska farm in Fillmore county which won the 1936 pasture contest, and the sorghum variety test in Jefferson county. Grass land management in Pawnee county was observed Thursday.

R. T. Malone, director of the state unemployment insurance division, reports that 26,000 employers in Nebraska should have received a packet from him last week; also that the postage on these packets amounted to $350, and that the missives filled forty sacks. Each packet contained information about Nebraska's new unemployment insurance law, and liability report blanks which the employers must fill out and return to the state office before August 10.

Dr. Herbert J. Stack, New York safety expert and director of the education division of the national bureau of conservation, conducted a series of tests at the University of Nebraska Thursday on 100 students. The tests, which were designated to show the necessity for more stringent safety measures,
