WHAT DOES "LONG DISTANCE" MEAN BY A-Y?

Do You Know?
 When a long distance operator says "A-y," she means "The person calling will talk with anyone available at the telephone called." "A g" means "Try again," and "B-y," "The line is busy." Operators use this verbal shorthand to save time and to speed up the handling of your call.
 By introducing time-saving practices and through addition of more lines and development of improved equipment, long distance operators now make connections on the average out-of-town call in about 90 seconds, less than one-fifth the time required 12 years ago. Sometimes circumstances prevent such rapid completion but often less time is required. Now nearly all calls are put through while you remain at the telephone... a dozen years ago, less than one-fifth were handled in this way.
 Through constant attention to training employees and by improving equipment and methods of operation we are doing all we can to offset increased taxes, wages and other expenses and still provide a high grade of service. Our aim is to provide the best possible service at charges which will give you constantly more and more for your money.
