Theme Songs
Concie Biglin, "Some Day, My Prince Will Come," or can it be he's already arrived?
Betty McNally, "I Still Love to Kiss You Goodnight." We can guess who the lucky person is, can't you?
Mickey Harrington, "How Would You Like to Love Me?" We know a lot of people that wouldn't find it hard to do.
Eileen McKenna, "You're An Education In Yourself." And what an education, if you get what we mean.
Lomie Finley, "For Sentimental Reasons." G. H. wouldn't have anything to do with it would he?
Vern Coyne, "On the Sentimental Side." It's the west side isn't it?
Concie Golden, "I Can Dream, Can't I?" Sure and we bet your dreams are about W. B.
Marge Cronin, "You Are My Lucky Star." It's an eastern star, isn't it?

pork has increased to a dangerous point. In 1934 about 1,648,000 pounds of dressed pork was imported. In 1935 that jumped to 10,500,000 pounds; in 1936 it jumped to 42,000,000 pounds. That means a tremendous grab of the domestic market which belongs to the American farmer. These hog members are busy urging their friends in the Senate to stick by the tax on foreign pork.

Gourmet society meeting in New York is told that the way to punish one socially is to invite him to dinner and serve him stringy beef and noisy celery in an atmosphere of boiling cabbage wafted from the kitchen. How about a little limburger for dessert?
