

Mighty Yankees on Way to Third World's Championship Title

The New York Yankees trimmed the Chicago Cubs in the first game of the World Series with a score of 3 to 1. Chicago had their ace pitcher in the box and he pitched a very creditable game, errors behind him spelling defeat.

In the game this afternoon Dizzy Dean was on the mound for the Cubs and pitched a very creditable game, but a couple of home runs was his undoing and the Yanks won again with a score of 6 to 3. Diz pitched a swell game until the eighth inning when Crossetti got to him for a home run with a runner on and made the score 4 to 3 for the Yanks. For five innings Dizzy had set them down without a hit, but this spelled defeat. To add to his humiliation Joe DeMag. of the Yanks clouted another homer in the ninth with a mate on board, which made the score read, Yanks 6, Cubs 3, and that was the way the game ended. The teams play again in New York on Saturday and it looks as if the Yanks would make it three straight.

Most of the O'Neill fans were pulling for Chicago but none of them were nery enough to put their money on them to win the series.

Holt County Native Dies in Seattle, Wash.

High School Gridders Win Another Victory

The O'Neill high school football team came through the first two games of the season without being scored upon. O'Neill defeated Burwell on the local gridiron last Friday with a score of 19 to 0. Three touchdowns were made by Hunt, Bill Ryan kicking the extra point in the third for Hunt. The line held very well. Some excellent tackles were made by Leo Valla and Don Mitchell.

Hugh McKenna was game captain for O'Neill and Leeffes captain for Burwell. The Burwell boys were a swell group and showed fine sportsmanship.

Next Friday we will play Bassett on the local gridiron and we expect another hard game. While we defeated Bassett last season it was only by a score of 6 to 0. It was a hard game and the score could have been either way.

Holt County Calf Sale, November 10, 1938

Plans are being made for one of the best feeder calf shows and sale in this part of the state to be held in O'Neill Sale Pavilion on Monday, October 10.

The show will be divided into the 4-H classes and the commercial classes with premiums which were contributed by the business men of O'Neill.

Calves will be shown as individuals in the 4-H club classes but will be shown in lots of one, five and twenty in the commercial classes.

Some extensive advertising has been done in eastern farm journals and among eastern county agents in order to secure both 4-H members who are in the market for baby heaves and feeders who are looking for larger lots and with favorable market this sale should be a good place to sell feeder calves.

Ranchers and farmers who have calves to sell are invited to bring them in for the show or sale in order the Holt county calves may be shown at their best to the outsiders who will be present.

Calves entered in the show will not have to be sold provided the management is notified when the entries are made.

Any desiring the complete rules of the show or additional information may do so by contacting the county agent, Lyndle R. Stout or Jim Rooney of O'Neill.

Suits in District Court

Esther Wright has filed suit in the district court asking for a decree of divorce from Ray Wright. In her petition she alleges that they were married on March 25, 1932, at Inman, and that she has always lived in Holt county. Two children were born to this union, aged 7 and four years. She alleges that he deserted her and the children on or about June 25, 1934, and that said abandonment still exists and that she does not know the present whereabouts of the defendant. She asks for a divorce and the care and custody of the children and for such other relief as may be just and equitable.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawson and Mr. and Mrs. Miler, all of Boone county, were up a day recently. The men, accompanied by Tom Baker, took in the sale at Atkinson. Gov. Cochran, with obvious reference to the pension ideas floating around, says expenditures can't be increased without increasing taxes. Not that this is anything new. It has been said a hundred times before him. It is a truth so simple it seems there is no need of stating it. What the taxpayer is interested in is cutting down government expenses by eliminating superlatives, the frills and various functions that are unnecessary. Perhaps one day we will awaken from the nightmare of extravagant spending and return to the old time policy of earn and save.

O'Neill Now Has An Aeroplane Factory With Three Operators

A week ago Sunday about fifteen cars gathered on the highway south of O'Neill to watch a test flight by a model airplane built by Jimmie Herre, Albert Rummell and Jimmie Holsclaw. The plane, however, took a nose dive and ruined the propeller and the boys spent the week repairing the damage, and last Sunday took it out in the morning and made a successful flight. The plane remained in the air the first flight for twenty-eight minutes, the first eighteen with the motor running and the last ten gliding down. The plane is equipped with a one cylinder one-quarter horse power gas engine making eighty-five hundred revolutions per minute. The wing spread is six feet and the plane is supposed to remain aloft for thirty minutes on one ounce of gas.

Judging from the crowd assembled to watch the flight, model airplane building has a lot of enthusiastic followers in the city and they will watch with interest the latest device which the boys say they are going to put on the plane. They intend to equip it with lights and a small camera, so arranged with a small watch that it will take some pictures from the air.

When Charley Bryan last run for governor it was the predominate political opinion that he was doomed to defeat and it was something of a surprise when he went under the wire the victor. Southwest voters feel kindly toward him because he was the only state official to do anything for the sand hill country.

War Cloud Passes Czechs Pay the Bill

The threatened war in Europe has collapsed. England and France gave Hitler what he wanted, at the expense of the Czech nation. The later is being dismembered and the settlement made at the conference of the four powers, England, France, Germany and Italy, last week is not taken very well by people in many sections of the world. The people of the Czech nation say they have been betrayed by their former friends. To the outsiders it looks as if Hitler and Mussolini were the victors in the conference and they emerged from it with greater power than they had before and it will only be a question of time until England and France will have to bow to the dictators.

THE NEBRASKA SCENE

By the Lowell Service

Organized opposition has developed against the proposal for an amendment to the constitution to legalize slot machines. The fight against the slot-machine plan is backed by a number of newspapers, churches, uplift clubs, and business organizations. Linked with it is a growing sentiment to curb parliamentary betting at the state fair. Newspaper blasts have been aimed chiefly at W. B. Banning and Perry Reed.

It is expected that the proposition to turn the state fair grandstand bonds into the permanent school funds as a gilt edge investment will bob up at the next session of the legislature. Opponents of the suggestion to buy the grandstand bonds declare they will seek to amend the measure to banish the parimutual from the fair grounds. The bonds to build the grandstand were issued several years ago. Receipts of the grandstand are pledged to meeting interest and principal payments on the indebtedness. During recent years it has been hard sledding for the investors.

Sporadic opposition is noticeable on the short ballot plan. J. N. Norton, of Polk, is championing the adoption of the short ballot. Co-operative banks in the small towns recently took action to endorse the amendment to reduce liability on bank stock.

Constitutional lawyers who undertook to solve the puzzle created by the conviction of Walt Jurgensen on an embezzlement charge admit that they must desist or face increased risks of being committed to asylums.

On advise of attorneys, Nate Parsons filed for the short term to serve from election day, November 8 until January 5, when the regularly elected lieutenant governor will assume office. A few days after the secretary of state placed Nate's name on the ballot the candidate braced Governor Cochran for an appointment, claiming that the office was vacant and must be filled by appointment by the executive. The governor stonewalled.

J. S. Kroh, of Ogallala, was nominated for the short term by the republican state convention at Fremont. The secretary of state has refused to put Kroh's name on the ballot, claiming that he neglected to file at the primary. The attorney general dug up the following statutory provision:

"When any political party fails to nominate a candidate for any office at the primary election, said place shall thereafter remain unfilled unless by petition as otherwise provided by statute."

According to this ruling Kroh could only file as an independent or stage a write-in campaign.

In the meantime, Charles J. Warner, republican candidate for governor, recently acted as chief executive while Governor Cochran was absent. Warner signed requisition papers for the return of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Morris from Warren, Minn., to Blair to face charges of removing mortgaged property. In order to act as governor, Warner, who is speaker of the house, must be occupying the post of lieutenant governor. Therefore, there is no vacancy.

The high-powered attorneys indulged in heated argument for several weeks. Now they duck and run whenever a reporter asks for information. Several bills are being drawn for constitutional amendments to clarify the situation. One of them provides for a special election to choose a United States Senator in case of a vacancy. Now the governor appoints.

The state department of irrigation has received an application from the Panhandle Public Irrigation district, with headquarters at Alliance, the papers being filed by Doyle B. Dyer of Hemingford. The promotion of pump irrigation in all Box Butte county and in Leonard precinct of Dawes county is the purpose of the district, and it is proposed to finance the project locally and by borrowing federal funds. A specific statement is made that the district is not to have power to levy taxes or to issue general obligation bonds.

State Assistance Director Noel C. Vandemoer has ruled that names of persons receiving assistance are not to be made public, except upon order of the state board of control. The ruling was made when attention was called to the distribution by the Platte County Taxpayer's league of folders containing lists of assistance payments. Such distribution has been stopped since the county board received a letter from Director Vandemoer saying: "The attorney general has advised us that persons desiring this information should make written application to the board of control, stating reasons why they wish this" (Continued on page 6)

LOOKING FORWARD

By Franklyn Waltman

Now that the New Deal purge is over, at least for the present—with disastrous results for Mr. Roosevelt's prestige—the country can get down to the serious business of discussing and considering the real issues confronting it in this year's campaign. The purge effort, however, merits one more word.

There is no intention here to conduct a post-mortem on the abortive efforts of Mr. Roosevelt to drive out of public life a group of men, within his own party, who had the courage and, it might be added, the good sense to oppose him in regard to certain extreme and un-American proposals.

Light on Roosevelt's Intentions
Let the New Deal propagandists explain and defend Mr. Roosevelt's ignominious failure as they may. But New Deal explanations and alibis can not hide two conclusions which logically result from the entire purge episode. The first is that Mr. Roosevelt's activities revealed more clearly than any other thing he has done his determination to be the supreme ruler of the United States—to constitute himself a one-man government. His actions revealed him as a man who can not tolerate opposition to his will. This disclosure is highly important when we come to consider Mr. Roosevelt and his intentions in regard to other policies.

The second inescapable conclusion which flows from the purge episode, likewise, is highly important. It is that the American people can not be bought with promises of handouts from the Federal Treasury once their eyes are opened to the intentions of their President. In spite of the billions of dollars which the New Deal has and which it offered to spend in certain States, the Roosevelt-endorsed candidates in the recent primaries suffered crushing, humiliating defeats.

Does anyone really believe that if Mr. Roosevelt were now as popular in Maryland and Georgia as he was in 1936 that his personally selected and supported candidates would have been defeated as overwhelmingly as they were? Of course not. Actually many persons in those States in voting against his candidates were expressing their resentment and hostility against what he has done and what has happened since 1936.

The truth of the matter is that the Roosevelt Administration has lost the confidence of a great many persons who voted for the President in 1936. They were shocked by his Supreme Court packing bill and they have become convinced of the fallacy of the New Deal by the evidence of the Roosevelt depression.

"Go Home, Santa Claus!"
The results of the Democratic primaries in South Carolina, Maryland and Georgia—to name only three States where Mr. Roosevelt put forth his greatest efforts—failed to sustain the colorful contentions of Al Smith that "no one is going to shoot Santa Claus" and of Vice-President Garner that "you can't beat four billion dollars." If the voters in Maryland, South Carolina and Georgia did not shoot Santa Claus, they, at least, told him to "go home."

For Santa Claus certainly was in evidence in these States during the days preceding the primary elections. In Maryland, Senator Tydings' opponent opened his campaign speeches with announcements that the United States

Robbers Get Away With $2,000 Worth of Goods From Truck

Some time during the early hours of last Friday morning thieves looted the truck of the Daily Tobacco company of this city and secured about $2,000.00 worth of merchandise, consisting of smoking tobacco, cigarettes, candy and gum and escaped without leaving a clue. The stock was partially covered by insurance.

At the time of the theft the truck was parked in front of the home of John Daily, the manager, on Sixth street, just south of the City library and less than half a block from the busiest street in the city, Douglas. No one in that neighborhood heard any unusual sound during the night, nor were any strangers seen in that section of the city as far as known. One thing is certain that the thieves were well acquainted with the habits of Mr. Daily. They evidently knew that he loaded the truck the night before in order to start early in the morning to cover his territory and took advantage of this information.

Dealers in this section have been warned against purchasing tobacco from unknown dealers who might offer bargain prices and it is hoped that with the assistance of the dealers a clue might be obtained as to the identity of the thieves.

Housing Authority would spend millions of dollars on housing projects in the State. President Roosevelt publicly approved expensive bridge projects in that State—bridges, which it now appears will not be built with Federal funds. In the closing days of the Georgia contest millions of Federal dollars for highways and other projects were allocated to that State.

The people of Maryland and Georgia, however, were unimpressed by these promises of New Deal spending. Even in the counties of Maryland where the promised bridges were to be located and where the Federal housing was to be constructed, the voters gave substantial majorities to the man marked by Mr. Roosevelt personally for defeat.

Turner Catledge, chief political news writer for the New York Times and among the keenest and most objective observers in the country, after the fiasco of the Roosevelt purge in Georgia reported that "failure of spending inducements" was one of the factors in the crushing defeat of the President's candidate.

Mr. Catledge reported another observation regarding the Georgia primary which is contrary to the New Deal propaganda that although Mr. Roosevelt lost in the purge contests he and his Administration remain as popular as ever.

New Deal Criticized
This New York Times writer asserted that "reaction against the New Deal" was a major factor in the result and added that "from all of the protestations one heard during the campaign of love for President Roosevelt and the New Deal, no objective observer could fail to note a decided undertone of general criticism in many quarters."

"Furthermore," Mr. Catledge added, "this criticism was not confined to the business interests but could be noted as well out in the country, particularly in the cotton and tobacco producing sections where low prices and quota restrictions under the new farm program were anything but conducive to good feeling."

Does anyone really believe that if Mr. Roosevelt were now as popular in Maryland and Georgia as he was in 1936 that his personally selected and supported candidates would have been defeated as overwhelmingly as they were? Of course not. Actually many persons in those States in voting against his candidates were expressing their resentment and hostility against what he has done and what has happened since 1936.
