John L. Quig Enthused Over Boys Town

Recently on a return trip from Omaha the writer stopped at Boys Town for a short time only. On account of it being about noon day meal time we did not have time to go over the place again as we would have liked to. However, we did have time to go through three or four buildings. The first building was the dairy barn naturally, as we have been milking cows for so long we were very much interested in their dairy arrangement. This dairy is not as large as it should be in their establishment and there are not enough cows to furnish milk for the entire bunch of boys there at the home. If anyone has a cow that they would like to give Father Flanagan's home for Christmas, I am sure they would welcome a milk cow.

The next building was the swimming pool, I believe this swimming pool is 50x100 feet. If you want to see boys enjoy a swim stop there any time that you are going by. The next place we visited was the cobbler or shoe shop where the master shoe maker and his assistants are making over and repairing shoes every day of the week. No one knows the need of shoes and clothing they need in the home until they visit the home. You know it takes a lot of money to buy food, clothes and shoes for five or six hundred boys. I believe there is right near one thousand boys there now. This master shoemaker and his assistants are repairing and re-vamping old shoes. If you have any old shoes or any old clothes that you want to send in, box them up and the writer will come after them and send the things to them.

The fourth and last place was the noon day mealtime, in the big dining room. It is impossible to describe this meal. They start as a noisy, running, jumping bunch when they leave their work or the play ground for the meal and to wash and get ready for the dinner. As they enter the hall and dining room proper they are as nice and clean and well behaved bunch of boys as you will find in any home. Every one of them has his face washed and his hair combed and he looks like a little gentleman all by himself. Each boy has a place at a certain table and they go to that as quietly and perhaps more so than the average small boy at home. If a strange boy has arrived and its his first meal every boy at that table is very anxious to show him his place. After a short prayer every boy goes at the job of eating. I did not see one boy in the dining room that was finicky about what he ate. Every boy was hale, healthy and hearty. I am sure if those of you who go through Omaha will take a little time and stop at Father Flanagan's home for boys that they will have a different slant on life after you visit it, you will have a better feeling for the homeless boys and for Father Flanagan and his work. And now once more in closing. If you have any cast off shoes or clothing call the writer because we know what the need of clothes and shoes in this home is.

Lower Farm Prices

The alleged Presidential aspirations of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace have received a distinct setback in the election returns and in the fivering of the Wallace farm policies which have failed to give results and to restore normalcy although hundreds of millions have been expended in the efforts.

Although industrial prices have risen with improved business conditions, and the government has made strenuous efforts to improve agricultural prices, a recent study by the Statistical Division of the National Industrial Conference Board shows that the prices for eleven out of twelve principal farm commodities were much lower in September 1938 than the September average for the years 1923, 1924 and 1925.

Using the average for those three years as a standard of comparison, the price of milk in September 1938 was 34% lower; the price of eggs was 19% lower; the price of potatoes, 54%. Similarly, the grains show marked declines from the level of about fifteen years ago, with wheat down 55%; corn, 51%; oats, 47%, and hay, 46%. In livestock, the decreased prices for sheep, 50%, and for hogs, 13%, while beef cattle prices are the one element that shows a gain, 11%.

Why shouldn't I come right out with it? If people want to switch they will. Using Conoco Bronz-z-z they don't want to, and why should they? Just suppose it is 20 degrees colder today and they bought their Special Winter Blend Conoco Bronz-z-z yesterday. Just the same, they can start right up, and they won't lose out on mileage, either—because their Conoco Bronz-z-z is refinery-adjusted according to all the weather records ever made here at this exact time of year. Probably most of my customers don't even think of that, because they just know they can start. That's all—they start. That's what everybody wants—quick-starting—and so that's what I've got here . . . quick-starting Conoco Bronz-z-z.
