Washington Memorial Days

In states like Nebraska, the scars of the "Civil War" or the "War of Rebellion" or the "War between the States," are pretty much healed, but here in Washington which is considered part of the South, those wounds are re-opened frequently. Just across the river in Alexandria there is a large monument erected in memory of confederate soldiers. Around that statue each year, on May 15, "Confederate Memorial Day" is observed. Members from the South eulogize the heroism of the confederate soldiers and nothing is said of the heroism of the Yankee.

On our own Memorial Day, May 30th, the ceremonies are numerous but the main one is held now in Arlington Cemetery where is located the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Tribute is paid to the memory of the men who preserved this Union of States.

Washington has many cemeteries and impressive memorial services are held in most of them. The floral tributes are profuse. The one ceremony that seems to attract most attention is the one held by a few surviving veterans of the Civil War at the impressive memorial erected to the memory of Abraham Lincoln. The majestic figure of the Great Emancipator faces the Mall and looks past the Washington Monument to the dome of the Capitol of our country. The few aged veterans of the Civil War usually place a simple wreath at the base of the Lincoln statue.

These old-timers know the sad and lonesome life led by Lincoln in this town. Those who frequently visit the room in which he died, usually leave with tears in their eyes. Memorial Day in Washington usually concentrates on the purpose of that occasion—to honor the memory of those who helped to preserve this nation in the war between the states.

Johnson's Drugs

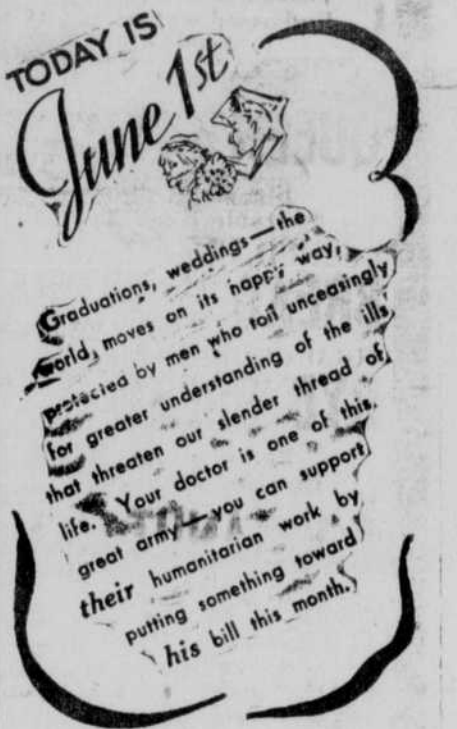

...protect your

vacation time is vaccination time

The most serious of the afflictions that endanger childhood are now so easy to avoid... Typhoid, Smallpox, Diphtheria, Whooping Cough—vaccine now stands between these dread diseases and your child. Take him to your doctor for this protection now—before the height of vacation activity with its new contacts and environments, now when no time will be lost from school. It will give you peace of mind and may save him from irreparable injury.

What Children Should Know About PRESCRIPTIONS

Your child is an individual—distinct, different from others in physical make-up, the same as in appearance. Teach him early that, because each person is different, mass production medicine is of doubtful benefit; teach him to rely on his doctor for individual diagnosis and medication individualized to suit exactly his own individual case.

Only individualized medication is professional medication... See your doctor.
