Holt Countyites Visit Quincy, Illinois

Sunday morning, May 19, Roy DeLong, who is a dealer in Moorman Mineral feeds in this territory, with his son Earl, and brother Merle, Ernest Bruckenhurst of Inman, Chas. Morton of Basset and Howard Oberle of Dorsey made a trip back to Quincy, Illinois, where they spent a day going through the Moorman factory, finding mineral being manufactured from raw materials at a very rapid speed; also went through laboratories where experimental work was being carried on; also visited experimental farms where tests were being carried on with various livestock, which proved to be very interesting and educational.

In going to Quincy they crossed the Missouri river at St. Joseph and came up through Eastern Kansas and visited oil wells at Falls City, Nebraska, also stopped at Nebraska City where they observed the home of J. Sterling Morton, which all proved very interesting.

The outlook for small grain in that direction is fair. They are late with their corn planting. The biggest share have just started to plant. All going reported an enjoyable trip.

Suggestions For Planting Of Sorghum Crops

Two of the best guarantees of a good yield of grain sorghums this year are to treat seed for smut and plant at the proper rate according to information from the Nebraska college of agriculture, pointed out by the county agent this week.

Estimates by A. E. Anderson, State and Federal Statistician, are that Nebraska's grain sorghum yield last year averaged 10 bushels per acre in spite of the drought. This yield probably could have been much higher except for one thing—planting too thick.

Some farmers, even in extremely dry areas of Nebraska reported they obtained good yields by setting planters or listers to drop seed at the rate of only two or three seeds per foot. This rate of planting under favorable conditions produces a plant for every 10 or 12 inches which in a good stand according to the Nebraska College of Agriculture.

Many other fields were a total failure because they were planted too thick with the result that they failed to head. The use of sorghum plates is necessary since corn plates are not satisfactory in giving uniform distribution of such a small amount of seed.

Some farmers have reported as much as 50% of their sorghum grain crop was lost last year because it was not treated for smut. Three ounces of copper carbonate dust properly applied to one bushel of seed will insure the grower practically 100% against loss from smut in sorghums.

Circulars are available free of charge at the county agent's office in O'Neill suggesting good methods of adjusting listers and planters for the correct rate of planting and outlining low cost methods of treating seed for smut.

A Clean-Up Held For Forestry Field Day

Country and city folks alike are repairing, cleaning and painting their buildings, yards and farm lots, getting them ready for their premier showing on June 16, when several thousand visitors will be in this area for the Nebraska Forestry Field Day and Picnic.

Many farmers are busy cultivating their shelterbelts and farmstead windbreaks. Several of the old timber claims have been cleaned up in order to have them appearing their best for the Forestry Field Day. The trees look better than they have for several years as a result of this extra attention.

Estimates of the crowd that will attend the Field Day range from fifteen to thirty-five thousand visitors. These people are coming to this community to see the trees and for a lesseon in tree culture. They will go home and praise your tree planting if it is well cultivated and the trees are growing. Plantings that are weedy will also be talked about but not favorably and they will leave a poor impression on the visitors.

City parks and picnic areas are being put in readiness to accommodate one of the largest crowds that ever turned out in this area.
