Who Gets the Beer Taxes? Since 1935, beer excise taxes amounting to $2,574,376* have been turned over to the State Assistance Department for the support of Nebraska's needy aged, for dependent children and the blind. Taxes paid by the brewing industry help to balance the state's budget and lighten the tax load on the individual citizen. The beer industry of this state, employing about 9,000 Nebraskans, invites your cooperation in protecting these benefits. We ask you to patronize only law-abiding retailers and to report violations to the public authorities or to this Committee. *From State Liquor Control Commission.
