Congress As Seen By Karl Stefan

When our Defense program was entered upon, a "moral embargo" was placed upon shipments to Russia. It was known that our preparations would need immense quantities of "Tool machinery" with which to make arms and ammunition. Russia had bought over thirty million dollars worth of such machinery. It had ordered much else, and it was claimed that all such materials were to be sold direct to Germany, hence the reason for the embargo. Among other things it purchased enough sole leather to provide soles for two million pairs of shoes—the kind used in the armies. The big shoe factories supplying our new armies explained that the increased price, demanding about 20%, is due to shortage of sole leather. Our tool machinery factories are far behind with their orders for our own forces. Suddenly, the "moral embargo" against Russia has been lifted. It is explained that it has been raised to "avoid friction" between the two countries. At almost the same moment Russia and Japan have renewed a fishery treaty under which Japan has steadily encroached upon the Alaskan seal and other fisheries close to our territories. "There's a reason for everything," as the saying goes, but to find the reason for so much which doesn't jibe is not easy.
