The Buffalo Election

Republicans of the nation have a right to be pleased with the results of the congressional election held in the Buffalo district on April 22. John C. Butler, the Republican candidate, was successful, defeating Mrs. Hattie Schwert, Democratic and American Labor candidate, wife of the deceased congressman, by a plurality of 1,500 votes. The victory was all the more pleasing from the Republican standpoint from the fact that most Republicans, viewing surface conditions, had not expected it.

The Buffalo district has been in the habit of going Democratic for a quarter of a century, so far as electing congressmen is concerned. This makes the Democratic upset all the more significant.

So far as "burning issues are concerned there was little difference in the stand of the two candidates. Both were opposed to the St. Lawrence waterways project, and both were opposed to our entrance into the European war. However, it was pointed out in the brief campaign that the Democratic candidate, Mrs. Schwert, could be expected as a loyal member of her party to follow the will of the President, loyally and perhaps more or less blindly, while Mr. Butler could be counted on as following all constructive policies of the New Deal opposition.

Furthermore, supporters of Mrs. Schwert declared that "the eyes of the nation" were on this Buffalo election and a defeat of Mrs. Schwert would be regarded as an expression of lack of confidence in the policies of President Roosevelt and the New Deal. On the other hand, Republican leaders declared the election of Mr. Butler essential to the task of rebuilding the Republican Party for the 1942 congressional election, the campaign for which is now only a few months ahead.

If the Republican victory in Buffalo were an isolated case, it might not have anything but local significance. However local elections held in various parts of the country during the past few weeks have shown an undoubted trend toward the Republican Party. Most important of these contests was the city election in St. Louis where the G. O. P. swept the platter clean. Another point encouraging to the Republicans lies in this fact: The Republican leaders have been fearful of the political effect of centering war industries in close districts. But Buffalo, with its tremendous steel and airplane plants, is one of the war industries centers of the United States. This fact does not seem to have helped the Democratic candidate to any important extent.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By FRANK P. LITSCHERT

Diplomats both in Washington and in Europe are speculating on what the real significance of the Russo-Japanese treaty may be. Official quarters in Washington still accept the document with non-chalance and declare it is not so important as it may look on the surface. Yet it is a fact that, under the surface, many are said to be somewhat disturbed over the implications. The same is true of London.

There are two sets of opinions on what may happen next. Some authorities declare that Hitler will attack Turkey and then Russia, going into the Ukraine. This theory may be wishful thinking, as, of course, any such program would make the British Isles safe from attack for the time being, and perhaps permanently.

On the other hand, there are observers who believe that Stalin is still working hand in glove with Hitler. They expect that when Hitler starts his next offensive the Russians will move south and take over Persia, which would give them an outlet to the Indian Ocean and put them next door to India. Just what will happen next, of course, only time can tell. But certain it is that the Russo-Japanese non-aggression pact carries no comfort for the United States despite our eight-year effort at wooing Stalin, which really began to crystallize when we recognized the red regime nearly seven years ago.

Pravda, the official organ of the Communist Party in Moscow, said recently that the pact was not directed against Germany as many in America profess to believe. On the other hand, Pravda boasted that the agreement upset the plans of London and Washington government into war against Hitler for the benefit of the allies.
