The House passed a bill providing more adequate compensation for certain dependents of World War veterans. The measure follows substantially the policy now in effect with reference to veterans of the Civil War. It provides that the widow of a veteran who served a minimum of ninety days, without children and who married the veteran prior to 1921, is entitled to compensation of $20 a month. If she has children and married the veteran prior to May 13, 1938, the widow's award would be $20 a month, with $8 additional for the first child and $4 a month for each additional child. The bill further provides that if a child but no widow survives the deceased veteran, the one child will be entitled to compensation of $12 a month, two children would draw $18 a month and three children would draw $24 a month, with $3 a month for each additional child. The bill also provides for dependent fathers and mothers of deceased veterans. Where there amount is $20 a month and where both parents survive, the amount is $15 a month, each. The estimated number of cases under this new measure is approximately 140,000 and the estimated cost for the first year is $22,238,000. The bill has passed the House but it will not be law unless and until it has passed the Senate and

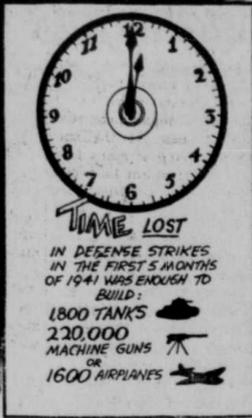

Pages in the House held graduation exercises the other day. They get $4 a day for running errands while Congress is in session. In the mornings these pages attend school in the basement of the Capitol. Their hours of work prevent public school attendance. Some of the graduates of previous pages

Freezing of German funds in this country has long been expected. Members have been told many times in the not distant past that many New Yorkers were making plenty of money trading with Axis powers. A Memorial Service was held in the House last Wednesday. It was to pay tribute to the memory of four senators and nine representatives who have died during the past year.

The Farm Credit Administration report shows that in the Third Congressional District, there were 2786 active standard rehabilitation borrowers at the end of 1940. The average borrower earned a net income of $596 during the year, compared with $387 in the year previous. The typical borrower family increased its annual net income by 54 per cent.

David Lesser is working in the WPA administrator's office. He was charged by some members of the House with being a radical and that he led a march of some kind in Pennsylvania. There was no proof that he is a communist but members were told he is among the thousands of radicals who are employed by the government in high places. So, the House in passing the relief and work relief appropriation bill amended it so that none of the funds could be paid to Lesser whose present salary is $4,400 a year. Each day the names of other employees of the government deemed by some member or members to be too radical, are being connected with demands that they be cut off the federal pay roll. Members didn't have much against Lesser but they figured that by this action they could force the Administration to do something about radicals in high places. As long as the House controls the purse strings of the government it can, if it so desires, limit the payment of appropriations to any person or activity.

The official Daily Treasury Statement of June 9—showed the financial condition of the Treasury since July 1, 1940, to be: Expenditures $11,627,536,217 Receipts 6,615,594,919 In the hole 5,011,941,297 The gross Federal debt on that date was $48,495,564,091. Your per capita share of that debt is $369.

school have become representatives, senators and many have responsible positions in private life. Pages in both House and Senate are patronage appointees—that is, the appointments are made by Senators and Representatives of the Majority party.

Mrs. Harry B. Fleharty, formerly of Omaha, has one of the most beautiful gardens in Washington. Her roses attract city-wide attention. Her husband is one of the special assistants to the Attorney General.

Certain influential members of the House never believed that the trees in our farm forestry projects lived and grew. Pictures of these trees on Nebraska farms that hung in the House lobby for a week, convinced these lawmakers that the plantings are successful and their opposition turned to approval.

Discussions in the House following the action of the Military Affairs Committee in reporting a bill to authorize blanket deferments under the Selective Training and Service act of Registrants between the ages of 28 and 35 indicate that the House will pass the measure.

Robert Hinckley, Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of Civil Aeronautics, has just returned from England where he studied aviation. He went by plane and returned by ship. He tells friends: "I saw plenty to make me thank God that I live in the United States of America."

Closing the German consulates and news agencies did not create the sensation in Washington that might have been expected. It is generally felt that it is materially short of breaking off diplomatic relations. Our consulates in Germany are still open, but those in Czech-Slovakia and Poland are closed. Rumors have it that the German Embassy staff here is packed up and ready to leave. Diplomatic opinion is that the breaking point has not yet been reached.

As the war comes closer home, many members have our situation sized up this way. We are at war with the Axis powers economically. The passage of the Lend-Lease Bill gave the President the right to aid belligerents anywhere. Congress would not pass a declaration of war if called upon to do so today.
