How the War Is Affecting the Telephone Business

The War Has Caused:

1. An unprecedented increase in the demand for local and long distance telephone service.
2. Acute shortages of materials needed to provide additional telephone lines and equipment.
3. Substantial increases in taxes and other telephone expenses.

The Result Is:

1. War needs for telephone service are being met first—promptly and fully.
2. In many communities, it is not always possible to provide, for civilian use, just the type of telephone service that is wanted.
3. Long distance calls placed by the general public may sometimes be delayed.
4. Telephone earnings are lower in spite of a much larger volume of business.

We thank you, the users of our service, for the fine cooperation you are giving us, and we pledge ourselves to continue to provide the best telephone service that is possible under existing conditions.
