

Portable Hospitals Follow U. S. Troops Through Jungle

United States army medical detachments care for the wounded in portable dispensaries and base hospitals amidst the background of jungle warfare in the South Pacific. So trained are the medical personnel to cope with jungle underbrush that soldiers wounded in action can be given first aid, frequently within ten minutes. Major operations are often performed within thirty minutes of the casualty.

First aid stations are found within 50 to 100 yards of the foremost fighting lines, and litter bearers dart in and out of the underbrush picking up the wounded, and carrying them to battalion first aid stations. Jungle fighting knows no curfew, and twenty-four hours of the day doctors with trained helpers are on duty at these first aid stations.

In picture at top two members of a medical detachment ready their portable hospital equipment for movement up to the front.

The detachment is trained to stand up under long marches over the roughest terrain, as shown in picture above. Here stretchers are being used to portage the supplies.

Patients leave the portable hospitals the following day and are carried on litters to clearing stations, some three or four miles further to the rear. These hospitals are very complete. Almost every type of wound or jungle disease can be treated.

In picture at left Major J. W. Guerin of Chicago, and Capt. Edmund H. Schweitzer of Peoria, Ill., prepare themselves for surgery.

Two sergeants and a captain remove a bandage from a "patient's" leg in preparation for an operation.

Men brought in from the field are placed in a ward tent. Still on litters which are supported by logs the men are awaiting removal by litter carriers to clearing station hospitals.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Laboratory tests demonstrate that rubber can be made to stretch from 50 to 1000 percent or to have no stretch at all, as in hard rubber.

A cubical piece of about half an inch of the substance we now know as rubber was selling for three shillings in London art shops in 1770. It was then called rubber because it could erase pencil marks.

The first articles of rubber to be manufactured were clothing and shoes.

American seamen are now equipped with rubber life-saving suits weighing slightly over 14 pounds. This new buoyant suit features a whistle, flashlight, knife and yellow hood and gloves to attract rescuers. Weighted shoes keep the wearer upright in the water.

ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

ALL started with a bright idea for making a simple, painted coffee table from odds and ends. The sketch at the lower left gives the dimensions and shows the simple construction. Two end sections were made first; the top and sides of these being fastened together with metal angles, as illustrated. A shelf was then nailed in and a 1/2 by 3-inch board nailed across the back of it. Two boards for the top of the table were then screwed to the end sections.

So far the table was substantial but crude and that is where the lady with the needle came in. The table was to be painted putty color and then waxed. She bought a yard of slightly darker tan sateen and applied a design of bright blue and red morning glories and green leaves on it with stems and tendrils in green outline stitch. This was placed over the table top and tacked around the edge. A piece of glass was then cut to fit and 1/2 by 3-inch pieces were screwed to the sides flush with the top of glass.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared a sheet—17 by 22 inches—giving complete dimensions and directions for making this table. Even the gal who is just learning to do small chores with hammer, saw and screw driver can follow these simple, clear directions. To get a copy ask for Design 254. Address:
