Judgment of Odors
That persons vary greatly in their judgment of odors is shown in a survey in which of 3,000 individuals tested for their reactions upon smelling freesias, 19 per cent said that this sweet-scented flower had no odor, 65 per cent said it had a weak or medium odor and 16 per cent said it had a very strong odor, reports Collier's. Of those persons who noticed the fragrance, 86 per cent found it pleasant and 14 per cent unpleasant.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

DOANS PILLS

Horses Still Go to War

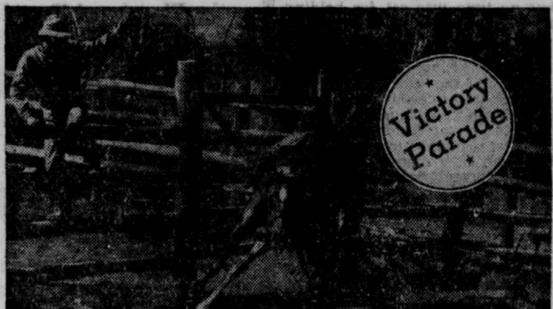

Herds of wild horses rounded up from the open ranges of frontier Australia are being tamed and trained for military work by American army forces there. Despite the ascendancy of mechanization in warfare the horse still has a place at the battle zones because of his mobility over difficult terrain. Most of the wild Australian broncos have never seen a human, and must be transformed from nervous, galloping, man-fearing beasts into steady, dependable, domesticated horses. This is accomplished by a process formerly known as "breaking" which American soldiers prefer to call "gentling," as the army horse is trained as gently and humanely as possible so that he loses all fear of mankind.

Stampeding herds of wild horses are guided into the swirling water of a stream by Australian horsemen.

This is what usually happens the first time an attempt is made to saddle one of the broncos.

After he becomes accustomed to the nearness of man, the horse is run into a corral, blindfolded and tied, as a saddle is placed on his back for the first time. When released he usually tries to buck the saddle off. During the last two weeks of the horse's basic training, bronco busters ride him until he no longer executes wild gyrations when something is placed on his back.

Above: Saddled for the first time, he races around the corral, bucking, fighting and squealing. Right: This is how they got the saddle on. Below: Calm and ready for duty, a trained horse stands loaded.

Occasionally a filly is born among the wild Australian horses. Here is one which has become a pet of the regiment. She is being treated for a slight cold by Pvt. J. Tuerger of Fort Worth, Texas.
Horses such as are trained in Australia will swim rivers and at night they are an advantage over motorized equipment because they can maneuver without lights. The horse is quiet. No other animal can, in an equal measure, endure extreme temperature changes.

PETER LORRE enjoys a successful romance for almost the first time in his villainous career in Warner Bros.' "The Constant Nymph"; he marries Brenda Marshall. But he found it hard to get out of character. "When I reached into my pocket for the ring, to marry Brenda," said he, "I whipped it out like it was my customary gun and almost tried to shoot her with it!"

stand. His father made him mow the lawn, at 25 cents a session, till he'd paid for the fiddle. After that his parents gave in and decided that maybe he wasn't cut out for a musical career—and he took up the violin in earnest!

Charles Coburn, who long ago established himself as one of the better actors of the legitimate stage, arrived in New York recently to find a different kind of fame awaiting him; three of his pictures were running at once—"The More the Merrier," "The Constant Nymph" and "Heaven Can Wait."

While directing "This Is the Army" Mike Curtiz also invented new military commands. During a location trip to Fort MacArthur some of the Fort's soldiers were within his camera range for a shot. He grabbed the microphone and yelled, "You men back there by the house! Attention! Take a powder!"

When John Warburton decided to return to pictures after an absence of six years, the studios just weren't interested. Then he was tested and signed for the featured role of Gary Cooper's rival in "Saratoga Trunk," and immediately offers began to pour in; two studios wanted him "right away."

Warren William, back at work in "Passage to Suez," after months of illness, has the farm labor shortage to thank for his present excellent physical condition. When he was released from the hospital doctors prescribed exercise. Warren had half a dozen acres of unpicked oranges and could not get help. So he pitched in, with the result that he now has his health back, and also had one hundred crates of oranges to send to market.

Pretty soon those Ameche brothers won't know which career is whose. Don was established on the screen when his younger brother, Jim, tackled radio, using an assumed name till he'd made good, then switching back to his own. Now he's master of ceremonies of "Here's to Romance," and Don's to begin an air-series in the fall—also as master of ceremonies. Meanwhile there's a prospect that Jim may turn actor, if he can find a suitable play.

Samuel Goldwyn, who's famous for—among other things—turning beautiful girls into screen stars, is trying something different with Constance Dowling; he's going to let the public discover her. You'll see her in "Up in Arms," with Dinah Shore and Danny Kaye.

That's an amusing new program, Arlene Francis' "Blind Date"; six boys in uniform, one by one, talking themselves into the good graces of three girls, whom they can't see; curtains on the stage separate them, but the audience sees all. Three lads win their girls and an evening at a famous night club.

ODDS AND ENDS—As no doubt you've heard by now, James Stewart (the movie's Jimmie) has been promoted, and is now a captain. . . Arthur Allen, who plays "Don't Dicker" in NBC's "Snow Village," has a collection of 145 flatiron holders. . . Joan Crawford's checked in at Warner Bros. to start preparations for "Night Shift." . . Announcer Ben Grauer has a Central American Indian belt woven in colors that make you blink—what's more, he wears it. . . Ginny Simms' definition of the Mason-Dixon line (at least, her friends credit it to her). "That's the division between you-all and youse-guys!"

Farmers Can Raise Spices Now Imported

Western Hemisphere Can Supply All Needs

Every spice, seed and herb that the United States has been accustomed to importing from the Orient can be grown successfully in the Western hemisphere, either in North or South America, believes John A. Sokol, president of a chemical company bearing his name. In an address before the annual Chemurgic conference recently held in Chicago, he divided the plant products into two groups, according to the climatic conditions under which they grow.

First, he said, is the temperate zone, which covers central Europe, the Mediterranean area, Russia, northern India, and northern China. The second zone would comprise the tropics, semi-tropics, and particularly the East Indies close to the equatorial area.

From the temperate zone he have been importing herbs, cloves, all-spice, ginger, cinnamon, cassia, nutmeg, mace, turmeric, etc.

The items in the first category, namely those grown in the temperate zone, can all be grown in some part of the United States, and the items from the tropical zone could be grown in some of our possessions and also in Central and South America. All of the items under spices for seasoning and condiments could be grown in the Western hemisphere.

That these particular items, he said, could be grown in the United States has been demonstrated.

Other seeds, such as poppy, caraway, dill, coriander, celery, fennel, and anise, have been grown in the United States to some extent. None of these items are available from Europe now and with the present difficulties of obtaining these seeds from India, China and other foreign countries, there are prospects that the growers would find these profitable for the next couple of years at least, Mr. Sokol thinks.

The herbs which have been grown and cultivated here are sage, marjoram, and basil, and an effort is being made to increase their production in this country.

All of the products grown in the United States have been found to be of very good quality and most of them compare very favorably to the products imported from abroad. Also with the American ingenuity to adapt special methods of planting, cultivating and harvesting, much of the low labor cost in foreign countries could be overcome.

Some of the outstanding products which have been grown successfully in the United States are mustard seed, grown in Montana and California, paprika (the sweet grade), grown in California, Louisiana and South Carolina, and sage, marjoram, thyme and basil, grown in practically every state of the United States.

Mr. Sokol continued that he was not giving any figures of the quantities grown, but that he felt assured that with the proper effort and co-operation of the various agencies, American housewives and the food industry can be fully supplied with many of the spice seasonings from products grown in the United States, the tropical possessions, and some of the South American countries.

Farm Notes

More than one-third of the Home Nursing certificates issued by the American Red Cross during the year, ending June 30, were issued to women in rural America.

Glycerine is now banned for use in foods, tobacco, cosmetics, and toilet preparations. Medicinal use has been cut to 60 per cent of normal, all because of war demands.

Pigeon Chutists

Carrier pigeons employed by U. S. armed forces are today being lowered from planes in crates, suspended by midged-sized parachutes. If pigeons were released at 25,000-foot altitude from a plane moving 400 miles per hour without this protection, wing feathers would be blown off by the blast of air from the propeller, and birds would freeze to death. After a carrier has descended several thousand feet in the crate, the door of the crate is automatically opened, releasing the bird to do its duty.
