These candidates for delegates and alternates believe that many of the ideals and practices of Nebraska—especially in economy of government—should be observed by the national government. Governor Griswold symbolizes those principles, and for that reason these delegates will promote his name wherever practicable.

However, since the great majority of delegates will go to the convention unpledged—free to vote for the nomination of Republicans for president and vice president who are hest qualified and most available—that is exactly what these Nebraska delegates intend to do.
